Amazon One of the best things about being home right now is being able to test our cocktail cooking skills, or at least see if we have one. It's no secret that we've all tried to become experienced professionals in the bartender business, and most likely failed. But hey! It's funny, isn't it? So if you fancy aligning these impressive at-home cocktail-making sessions, it's worth taking a look at Amazon's best-selling perfumes, as they're shrinking right now. If you're after some Aperol in an attempt to make a delicious Aperol Spritz known to the man, or some Gordon's Pink Gin so you can crack with some experimental gin cocktails, head over to Amazon and you can order them for delivery right to the front door. Amazon's 70cl bottles of Aperol have been reduced from 13.00 pounds, to 12.00 pounds. Is it just me, or does anyone else drink Aperol and feel like they're in some kind of Italian resort? There's no better feeling than having Aperol Spritz in hand, basking in the sun (I know you agree). Gordon Gordon's pink gin is currently only 14.50 pounds for a 70cl bottle, saving you 2.50 pounds, as it was originally priced at 16.50 pounds. Pink gin is the perfect way to sweeten these HST you were making, especially if you don't too much like these bitter tonics. The famous grouse of the famous grouse whisky has been reduced by 4.82 pounds, currently only costing 16.00 pounds, rather than the usual 20.83 pounds. Is whisky your business? This whiskey has a well-balanced taste of oak sherry and a hint of citrus flavor, and it's pretty cheap right now! J.J. Wheatley Originally 19.99 pounds, J.J. Wheatley Cherry Gin dropped in price to 18.00 pounds, saving you 1.99 pounds. Described as having sweet stone fruit and a fresh orange flavor with the initial sweetness leading into marzipan, sour cherries and juniper tastes, this sounds pretty dreamy and I'd certainly try it out in some gin cocktail. Wheatley Neal This rhubarb and Ginger Jean from Neil has been reduced to 22.06 pounds, down from 26.00 pounds, a pretty decent saving if you ask me. Beefeater Jean Beefeater Pink Strawberry Gin costs just 14.00 pounds right now, and that's the usual price tag of 18.00 pounds. It will taste great with your favorite tonic, a handful of ice and a bunch of heaps of to finish. This content is imported from a embedded name. On Tuesday, Deloitte, which manages one of the largest consulting practices in the world, published a list of companies it considers to be the most exceptional in the United States. Not on the list: The $338 billion search engine company that has come to dominate the Internet has generated $90 billion in profits over the past 10 years, and is an everyday aspect of life for most Americans. Not exceptional. Not just No.1. Google is not in the top 100 at all. Also not on the list: Amazon, the future king of retail, and Wal-Mart, the current king, and the largest employer in the America.No Facebook, and not Twitter, although perhaps the exclusion of the latter is not a surprise. Deloitte gives almost the entire financial sector what, for better or worse, still makes up a lot of our modern economy, an insult, including JPMorgan Chase, Goldman Sachs, and Wells Fargo. The U.S. Bank made the list of well-deserved award for the ever-good performer-on No 93.Coca-Cola is also on the list, at No.60, just 11 places behind its longtime rival PepsiCo, which is currently under attack from activist investor Nelson Peltz.What about Apple? Apple is on the list but, at No.13, just below Fastenal, the company's construction parts, and MSC Industrial Direct, a distributor of building parts and tools. It's a strange list. The No.1 company on the list is the most exceptional company in America right now, according to Deloitte-is Copart Inc.What is Copart? Copart is a Dallas-based automotive auction company. This home page advertises the following line tag: No license. No problem. The most exceptional company in America sells cars to people who do not have a driver's license. Seriously, how did I find out? I googled it, of course. Michael Raynor, director of Deloitte Services, who co-authored the list along with Deloitte's director of strategy, Mumtaz Ahmed, said Deloitte had looked at three indicators to come up with a rating: profitability, growth and market value of the company's shares. on these criteria, it is easy to see why some of the companies mentioned above are not on the list. Amazon is now turning into a very low profit, relative to its huge huge Sales. And Wal-Mart isn't growing much these days. But Google? Last year, Google's revenue grew by 20%, at a time when the overall U.S. economy is growing in single digits. The company's profitability is almost 60%, which is 50% better than Copart. Raynor says it's possible that Google didn't make the list because it hasn't been around long enough. Again, Netflix's NFLX 0.36% - which was founded in 1997, just a year before Google was launched - is on the list of no 63.Part unexpected results are simply due to business rankings, and Raynor acknowledges that. He says he didn't want to have a list of leading companies that were like everyone else. Just like anyone else. But you can see how this leads to stupidity, even if Raynor's initial view of the look at companies that have shown above average growth and profitability over long periods of time makes sense. What this will lead you to is a list of companies that make construction parts or are in the shipping business, sectors where companies make stable profits, not technology, an industry that many will label as an exceptional part of our economy. Raynor says Deloitte tried to give people a different perspective on the world. And the list certainly does that. This is a world where the most exceptional company in America hawks cars at auctions, and one in which Google is not even on the radar. Update: After repeated questions about Google's absence from the Fortune list, Deloitte, which has only published a top 100 companies, emailed to say that Google is on its list of exceptional companies at No. 154. So you go. Congratulations to Googliters, you are working for the 154th most exclusive company in America.
