Therefore, the definition of a. conversion does not depend on the choice of homogeneous coordinates for a given point. Let me explain why we move to a homogeneous coordinate frame. By this definition, multiplying four homogeneous coordinates by a common, non-zero factor (K) gives a new set of homogeneous coordinates for the same point. I did a Google search on a homogeneous transformation that has just returned results that give examples such as rotation, scaling, etc. This can be seen as a 3D analogue of the 2D transformation matrix (3.52). It can be defined as a total rigid body homogeneous transformation Scooped by ipkwsuz Scoop.it!
