We’ve been hearing from many candidates who want to show their support for #VoteScience and have asked how they can engage with the campaign as a candidate.
Here are some ways you can support the campaign and show Canadians that you are committed to championing policies that support science and evidence-based decision-making:

- Take a #VoteScience selfie (and post it to social media!).
- Encourage your campaign team to take #VoteScience selfies.
- Respond to constituents who reach out about #VoteScience.
- Take a look at our questions for candidates postcards, and make sure you have answers ready.
- Consider these pressing science policy issues. Share what thoughts or stances you have using the #VoteScience hashtag on social media.
- Participate in debates and events related to science issues in the lead up to the election.
  - For example, participate in the 100Debates on the Environment event taking place in your riding.
- Connect with #VoteScience campaign supporters in your local riding. Contact Evidence for Democracy to get in touch!
- Visit a constituent’s lab to learn about their research.
- Complete the science-policy questionnaire being delivered to your party.
- Visit votescience.ca to see all the ways the science community is engaging with you and your fellow constituents.
- Reach out to info@evidencefordemocracy.ca for help with achieving any of these goals!
