Disease in spanish examples

You thought Spain was just Rioja and Sherry? Think again. The sleepy giant of European wine is finally on the move. Spanish wine would come in two versions - oak and very oak. Now, there's less accent about keeping wines in the barrel for long periods and more about fruit flavour, and the wines are all good for it. Incredible progress over the past decade has turned Spain into breads of wine activity. Rioja now has a number of contenders for the red wine crown, and whites have improved from all recognition. The fragrant, Berry-rich Tempanillo grapes are the force behind most reds from Rioja, Rivera del Doro, and the ever-closer bows of Toro and Seagales. In Catalonia, the old vine Grantxa and Carinaina and newcomers Cabernet Sauvignon, Syra and Merlot are mixed to impressive effect. Perirat is the trendy area, while neighbouring Montsent is also impressive. In the northwest, try Birzo's reds made from Nessia, believed to be related to a boat. Further south, look out for the juicy young reds of La Manche and a more serious fare than Jomila made from Monslerle, Morvedera France. Whites are improving at a rapid rate, too. Look out for the fragrant Albrinho from the Reyas baix region, and the rupees sauvignon and merode verdesgos. And of course sherry (see fortified wines). Spain has more vineyard territory than any other country. Spain's least prominent wine candidate advert? A commercial, what do you think of Gatriakou Takaskolina from the Battle of Bilbao?
