- indicates that the connection should be used for RTSP control. - indicates that the connection should be used for RTSP data. RTSPServer and RTSPServerConnection are not part of the official client API. Both are under the section. RTSPServer The RTSPServer class implements an RTSP server that provides an endpoint over which the client can send and receive real-time control commands. In the following example, the user connects to the server and opens a session, to which the user then requests to begin streaming a file. .. code-block:: cpp // Open a connection with the server. std::shared_ptr conn = RTSPServer::Open("127.0.0.1", "49160", "127.0.0.1", "49160"); // Open the session. std::shared_ptr session = conn->OpenSession(); // Start streaming the media file. session->StartStream("rtsp://127.0.0.1/vod/out.m3u8", false, "vod", "out.m3u8"); // The session will live until there is an error or Stop is called. session.reset(); // Close the connection. conn->Close(); RTSPServerConnection The RTSPServerConnection class implements an RTSP connection. In the following example, the user opens the connection, then sends an RTSP method with a URL string, and 520fdb1ae7
