Your grandmother's patchwork blanket may have sentimental value, but if you're looking for a bedspread that complements your current aesthetic, you probably have some shopping to do. Today's blanket is an updated version of what you remember as a child. Many of our favorite styles are just as soft and cozy as they are eye-catching, whether woven from smooth and silky fibers like TENCEL or more organic sense materials such as lingerie and cotton. And unlike down comforters, which are often seasonal, the blanket is just heavy enough for the winter months, but breathable enough for a chart topping summer temperatures. As far as color and pattern go, you can delve into statement-making prints or choose the subtle shades-difficult part that will just whittling down your options. Here, a handful of our favorite blankets and lids. Give your bed a much-needed dose of color and texture with Schoolhouse's Channeled Cotton quilt. Since the blanket is reversible-front deep mustard and the back is pinstriped with white and gray- you can flip it whenever you want to upgrade your space. While there are many ways to style it, we say a bunch of it A top of other retro-leaning lingerie (see: Pendleton) for summer camp believe it's straight out of Wes Anderson's Moonrise Kingdom. Pendleton is one of those iconic American brands that have stood the test of time. And their glacier National National Printing is undoubtedly one of their most recognizable design motifs. This 200-thread-counting cotton percale blanket features simple but bold stripes in green, red, yellow and black that give it a campy yet exquisite rustic feel that is both on trend and timeless. As an added bonus, the blanket comes with matching deceptions and every piece of the set machine washes. Since it's a quality relic-yes, you can pass this baby down a generation or two, you don't have to worry about durability, either. Courtesy of Serena and Lily Lee you decorate the beach house or just want to bring a fresh, ocean vibe to your landlocked bedroom, Serena and Lily have perfected the coastal cool look. One of the brand's signature models, Granada, can literally change the atmosphere of your space in an instant. The seal is inspired by classic Indian botany and when paired with air tassels and bright coastal colors (think French blue, moss, and terracotta), it nails the Nantucket look. Each Granada quilt is hand-stitched from a mixture of cotton and linen and finished with exquisite accents including individual lines. Pros don't stop there, either; It is also easy to clean and be tossed directly into the washer and dryer. If you have ever dreamed of sleeping in the clouds, then this ethereal parachute is the only one for you. The lightweight, airy, and overstuffed blanket is made of 100 percent long basic Turkish cotton, which is so plush, you can forget that you sleep in your bed. Parachute dubs bedding their fluffiest blanket yet, explaining that it's made with layers of organic cotton and then stuffed with 100 percent poly batting to fill. Despite its slim appearance, the blanket that comes in white as well as two tones of natural/ivory, smoke/blush, and steel/smoke is a machine washes and can dry on a low setting. To keep your blanket in pristine shape, Parachute recommends using wooden dryer balls instead of drying sheets. Courtesy Sundance Catalog If you're not afraid to enter a small template in your space, say hello to the Tradewinds Patchwork quilt from the Sundance catalog. Block-printed bedding gets its cheerful hues from eco-friendly dyes while Kantha's embroidery form, which originated in India, adds its own mundane touch. The quilt is available in full/queen and king sizes and reviewers note that the quality is even better than they expected. Whether your style is bohemian, eclectic, or - still-minimalist, it will inject even more personality into your space. Courtesy Citizenry Nothing screams minimalist luxury quite like a linen blanket. Citizenry, our favorite socially impactful supplier of home goods, their stonewashed linen blanket as their one-and-done bed maker, and we couldn't agree more. Breathing an all-season blanket is a quick and easy way to add an organic element to your room and and Aside, it becomes softer and softer with each wash. We are also obsessed with every color in which it is offered, including soft blush, earthy olive green and burnt sienna. If you just can't make a choice without seeing them IRL, Citizenry offers flax samples so you can give them a test run before you buy. If you feel stuck choosing between patterned or hard bedding, then this Italian tile-inspired blanket is worth a look. Birch Lane's Brunelle has a monochrome mosaic print in a versatile grey palette that works well in both neutral rooms and those that already dominate color. While mid-black and white may seem dull at times-gray isn't quite the most statement-making color on the wheel after all- the jacquard matelasse blanket is nothing but thanks to its subtle pattern and texture. An added bonus? It's incredibly easy to clean- just toss it in your usual washer and dryer. Remember that denim jacket you snymed over ten years ago? It seemed like a lot of money at the time, but is it still your go piece now? Cultiver's quilt bedcover is basically the bedding equivalent. Like your denim coat, this luxurious blanket, made of 100 per cent flax woven from European linen, will become softer and softer over time. We also love that it's a bit oversized, meaning that it will gracefully fall to the floor rather than coming up short on the sides-problem of many comforters and face blankets. It is available in a muted natural stripe, indigo strip and two solids: twilight roses and charcoal gray. When it comes to patterns and weaves, we trust interior designer and decor guru Annie Selke to guide us. Her new Batik Blue Coverlet, made from machine-intensive crispy cotton, is just one example of why. Inspired by South Asian textiles but finished with a modern twist, it has bandana borders and a gorgeous indigo and ecru pattern that can adapt to the most modern homes. If you get bored with the pattern (although we don't see what's going on), you can also flip it over and take advantage of its solid back indigo. Complete the look with some white sheets, matching deceptions, and accent throw. This simple but sophisticated blanket can keep its own in department looks and guess what? It comes in at only part of the price of its competitors. The Antenore Woven Stripe Coverlet is made of a light, breathable cotton blend that is soft both to the touch and to the eye. Although the grey hue gives it a masculine feel, it is incredibly versatile, and it also offers an element of visual interest thanks to its texture and thinly striped design. The best part is that it requires very little care as it can be tossed into the washer and dryer, and show that once it came out, no iron or steamer was required. If you are looking for a blanket in a very specific shade, check out Garnet Hill's color happy sleep Collection. The line, which also has matching deceptions and pillow covers-includes a number of trendy shades from moody burnt chestnut deep and cool indigo. Each of the elevated blankets is made of highly soft cotton and since they are hand-stitched, the end result includes some textural ripples. With the middle of the weights to fill, the blanket is warm enough for winter, but breathable enough for the hot summer months, too. Timeless, luxurious and comfortable. These three words will basically set up this silky blanket from Pine Cone Hill - one of Annie Selke's brand names. Like the other parts in the selke in the Silkin Solid collection, the blanket is built from TENCEL, a sustainably derived fiber that is very durable, soft, and breathable. Aside from being luxuriously smooth against your skin, the really cool thing about Puff is that in order to reach the fluffy and puffiest bed imaginable, all you have to do is give the blanket a little shake in the morning. As magic, it will fill up to perfection and your bed will be made. Did. free labyrinth walk quilt pattern pdf. labyrinth walk quilt pattern free download
