Jackson in which hundreds of venomous snakes are released on a passenger jet flying between Hawaii and Los Angeles. Prior to its release in theaters, the b-movie style title combined with Jackson's casting resulted in a lot of hype for the film online, resulting in a number of parody videos and fan art. University of Pittsburgh administrator David Dalessandro wrote the first version of the script that would go on to become Snakes on a plane after reading about Indonesian brown three snakes that climbed into cargo holds during World War II. Child Actor and Final Destination 2 director David R. Ellis [2] was tapped to direct and soon after, Samuel L. Jackson signed on after seeing the title of the film. Originally Posted by yippywhippy.
