Trainz: Simulator 12 introduces new user interface and a number of gameplay features. When asked about the game, Studio Director Chris Bell said: "Trainz Simulator has always offered players a unique railway experience. We have now developed the next step in the evolution of the game, and the result is Trainz: Simulator 12. This is a train simulation game unlike any other. It has multiple classes of railway vehicles, two distinct game modes, and a level of gameplay detail that has never been seen before.

Trainz: Simulator 12 has added a huge amount of features that will offer a wide range of gameplay options for everyone." Features Trainz: Simulator 12 has a user interface designed to make it easier for players to use, while still remaining visually attractive. The game's interface has been modified and all options are now under menus instead of on the toolbar. New features include a new game screen which shows track plans in context to the game world. This is the most significant feature in the game, allowing players to plan routes around specific track points or sections of track. The game's loading screens have also been redesigned to improve gameplay and the loading times between game modes have been cut down. Players can also load saved games on any computer, while also being able to save progress on computers other than their own, eliminating the need for players to copy and paste data. The game's landscape editors have been improved in a number of ways. It is now possible to build custom routes using a combination of segments and isochrones. Isochrones are displayed on the map editor as a line that is visible through game objects. Trainz: Simulator 12 also contains a number of game modes. These include: Realistic - A mode that allows players to build, ride and operate a new railway network. Players can build or 520fdb1ae7
