At first I thought it felt solid, would be easy to wipe clean and was at a great price. However, as soon as I got it home and took it out of the bag I decided that it wouldn't be the mattress she would sleep on. First of all, once I took it there was a lot of soda, it should be left in the air for a few days, and even then the surface had an even bigger odor than I ever would like for my toddler to sleep on, regardless of the protector and sheets above it. The second thing I noticed was as soon as I put it on the crib it felt like it wasn't as firm as it should be. Both of these reasons along with the low price were enough for me to look at other mattress options. The mattress kolcraft crib 80 coil innerspring crib mattress with hypoallergenic layer pillows and Perm-Dry waterproof cover. It is also certified by Gold GREENGAURD. What these characteristics mean for me and my child. Basically, not many bells and whistles, this simple mattress system feels with a light top pillow and plastic lid feeling. One thing like that with this waterproof cover is that because of the more plastic feels that it easily wipes clean and does not absorb any moisture, however it is also not very breathable and can be a little warm for your baby's back. This mattress when I put on the crib didn't feel as solid as I had hoped. It might have had little to do with the crib platform was a bit elastic rather than a solid, solid surface; but whatever the end result was not solid enough for me to feel confident in use for my child. I'm sure this mattress could be fine for a certain period of time, or if it was on top of a solid piece of plywood or a similar surface. Besides the support feeling a little sub-par I also felt that there wasn't much separation of the coil system from the top surface of the mattress and with great use and our baby growing that coil would begin to be able to be felt under the plastic surface. Obviously with this mattress all I can think of is a cliché term you get what you pay for. The $50 price tag for what initially seems like a decent bed is attractive until you take it out of the bag and realize that your new kid will spend more than half a day every day on this mattress. It's a good mattress at a reasonable price and not much more than that. If you are not able to afford much more than this mattress, it will probably only do fine, but if you have a budget to spend more I would like to look at the alternative I ended up going with Sealy Premier Posture Double sided Crib Mattress and found that for $80 more I was much happier. December 25, 2015 Nick mattress at the price of a good purchase! Helpful? December 21, 2015 for the money is his fine, but its kinda cheap but will do currently, haven't met for long-term use I'd say. Helpful? Thank you for not wanting time to review our Kolcraft Comfort Crib Mattress and Toddler Bed. This mattress includes strength test coils to help ensure their last tot is well through the toddler years. If you have additional questions about the quality of your mattress, please contact our customer service team at 800-453-7673. We will be happy to help in any way that we can. We hope this information will help! December 7, 2015 This bed looks very beautiful. It was difficult to put together many individual straps that had to be lined up to fit properly. It took me and my son an hour. It was very reasonably priced and I will only use it from time to time when my grandchildren visit. If I needed a bed for every day, I'd choose a better model. Helpful?
