Canadian/American writer T. Harv EkerBorn (1954-06-10) June 10, 1954 (age 66)Toronto, Ontario, CanadaNationalityCanadianOccupationProfessonnic SpeakerTrainerChildren2 T. Harv Eker (born June 10, 1954) is an author, businessman and motivational speaker known for his theories about wealth and motivation. He is the author of the book Secrets of the Millionaire Mind published by HarperCollins. Ecker's early life was born in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, and lived there her childhood. As a young adult, Eker moved to the United States and started a series of more than a dozen different companies before having success with an early fitness retailer. After reportedly earning millions through a network of fitness stores and then losing his fortune due to mismanagement, Eker began to analyze the relationship of rich people with their money and wealth, which led him to develop theories that he promotes in his letter and speech today. Eker's theories in writing and talk often focus on his concept of Millionaire Mind, a collection of mental relationships that promote wealth. This theory suggests that each of us has a financial plan or internal scenario that dictates how we treat money and that by changing that plan, people can change their ability to accumulate wealth. Other theories attributed to Eker include the concept that people are unwilling to make major sacrifices to succeed in playing the role of the victim and deny that they have control of their own situations. Another concept is that guilt prevents the search for wealth and that thinking of wealth as a means of helping others removes that guilt and allows for the accumulation of wealth. In his book, Eker lists 17 ways in which the financial plans of the rich differ from those of the poor and middle class. One of the themes identified in this list is that the rich abandon the limitation of beliefs while failing to succumb to them. rich people focus on opportunity while poor people focus on obstacles; and rich people admire other rich and successful people, while poor people resent rich and successful people. Businessman Eker founded the seminar company Peak Potentials Training. According to a press release from Peak Potentials, the company was acquired by Success Resources, which produces events in 2011. Eker has been conducting seminars since at least 2001. In a 2005 article in The Wall Street Journal, Eker cites as an example of changes in non-fiction publication. The WSJ article examines his use of his seminars, contacts and personal followings as a platform with which promoting the sales of his own book. Author Eker is the author of Secrets of Millionaire Mind, which appeared on the New York Times bestseller list and was #1 #1 Wall Street Journal business book list. He also wrote a self-described book called SpeedWealth. A 2010 Report by the Vancouver Sun alleged that Eker was named in a promising class action lawsuit involving two people who purchased residential property from people they met while attending one of his seminars. Another Vancouver Sun report from 2007 alleges that Eker Peak Potentials Training Inc. used high-pressure sales tactics during the Millionaire Mind Intensive course at the Wall Centre in October 2005. The plaintiffs alleged that Eker and his company violated the Canadian Consumer Law as a result of widespread variability in seminar prices. Links to the secrets of the millionaire's mind. He grew up in Toronto, but spent most of his adult adult United States. Money was not enough throughout his childhood, so at thirteen years Eker began his career. As a teenager, he delivered newspapers, scooped ice cream, sold novelties at fairs and suntan lotions on the beach. After a year at York University, he decided to take time off to realize his dream of becoming a millionaire. As an early adult, he lived in five different cities, including Lake Tahoe and Fort Lauderdale. He had different jobs and started more than a dozen different businesses, but no matter what he did or how hard he worked, he just couldn't succeed. Finally, after years of disappointment, Eker hit the jackpot. It opened one of the first retail fitness stores in North America and grew the business to ten stores in just two and a half years. He then sold part of the fortune 500 corporation. With the sale, Eker achieved his dream. He was finally a millionaire; however, in less than two years the money had disappeared. Thanks to a combination of poor investment and uncontrolled spending, Eker returned to his original net worth... Once again. It was at this point that Eker began to develop his theories about people's mental and emotional attitudes to money. He realized that his domestic money thermostat was set for a certain amount of financial success, and that everyone else had a financial point point too. His deepest discovery was that this money plan could be changed. Using the principles and practices found in his book The Secrets of the Millionaire's Mind, Eker resets his own plan to not only succeed, but also preserve it and grow it, and become a multimillionaire. Over the years, Eker swore that if he ever got rich, he would help others do the same. He kept his promise. It has already touched the lives of more than 2 million people, helping them to get closer to their goal of true financial freedom.
