If you want to do a shorter video with or without the soundtrack, you can do that. You can use anything from a webcam, phone camera, you can do any camera that shoots video, it comes with 30, 40, 60, 80, 120, 160, or even 200 videos to edit and play. The videos have no format restrictions. If you want to post something in youtube, and you don't have a channel or a youtube channel, you can use that Coub channel to post. Just hit play on the page, and you will see the output of the video. It's all just an HTML5 video with the option to add some special effects or add additional footage. If you add additional footage, you can even add subtitles, which is perfect for those with poor English. And you can pick from three different video formats. You can play the videos in your browser, and you can download them. Or you can save them as videos to your hard drive. They are all just normal videos. They are not any other file types, like.mp4,.avi, or even.wmv. It comes with the option to add music, but you can't upload it yourself, so the music comes from youtube, or what's called an "frame". What that means is that Coub gives you a web page where you can paste a youtube video, and instead of your video it will give you a youtube video. So it's all just normal youtube videos. The video you choose goes in the special "playlist" on the left, and you can watch the videos one by one, or you can play all of them in the queue. A lot of people are asking me what the limitations are for Coub, so I want to answer that. It does have limitations, but you can do pretty much anything you want with it. You can't download youtube videos, but you can copy and paste them into your Coub videos, or just create new youtube videos. That means that you can take videos from your pc, from phone cameras, from youtube, your computer, and take those videos and mix them together, and you can make them a lot longer. You can make "mashups". You can add songs to your videos, you can add effects, you can add video overlays and transitions. You can add multiple 520(dba)e7
