The plot focuses on a previously overweight high school nerd (Reynolds) who tries to get rid of the zone after reuniting with his lifelong crush and best friend (Smart) while visiting his hometown for Christmas. The film revolves around the humorous observation of strictly platonic relationships, just friends or just like best friends. He was shot dead in Regina and Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. The film was released on November 23, 2005 and grossed $50 million. Plot In 1995, Chris Brander (Ryan Reynolds) is an overweight high school student who secretly has a huge romantic crush on his classmate and best friend Jamie Palamino (Amy Smart). After acknowledging his feelings, writing them in Jamie's yearbook, he attends their prom. As he returns Jamie's yearbook to her, he secretly replaces her despicable ex-boyfriend, Tim (Tai Olsson), who reads the declaration aloud to everyone and humiliates Chris. Jamie doesn't reciprocate his romantic feelings; after they share a brief kiss on the cheek. Chris has tearfully left the party, announcing that he will never return and vows to be more successful than everyone else. In 2005, Chris lost weight, handsome, lives in Los Angeles; and is a womanizer and a very successful producer. Before Christmas, Chris's employer, KC CEO (Stephen Ruth), asks Chris to accompany a nascent self-described pop singer named Samantha James (Anna Faris), with whom Chris once went out and then ended up in a hospital in Paris to make sure she signs a contract with their label, an order that Chris reluctantly obeys. During a trip to Paris, Samantha accidentally set fire to her private jet, causing the plane to land in New Jersey, near Chris' hometown. Chris takes Samantha to his mother's house to endure the night and reconnects with his teenage past, including his unresolved feelings for Jamie. Samantha meets chris' mother and 18-year-old brother Mike (Christopher Marquette), who is very much in love with Samantha. At the local bar, Chris meets old classmates, including his other best friend Clark (Fred Evanwick) and his wife Darla (Amy Maticio); he also meets Jamie, who works as a bartender to feed himself through graduate school to become a teacher. Chris plans to impress and seduce Jamie by having Mike keep Samantha busy during his date with Jamie, but the realization that Jamie's platonic friendship is essential to him hinders Chris' plan. During a friendly skating day date, Chris is taken away in an ambulance after injuring himself during a hockey match with Jamie and a trio of kids (who begin to share a dislike on him for his inexperience). On stage, Jamie is reunited with Dusty Dinkleman (Chris Klein), a paramedic and former high school nerd who was also in love with her, while Chris teased all the kids in town for losing the game. The next night, Chris goes to Jamie's Christmas party, planning to reveal his feelings for her, but he finds Dusty already there winning guests with his charm and musical talents. Returning to Chris, Samantha ambushed Mike and demands to know the whereabouts of Chris, he tells her where he went after she kisses Mike. Furious, she drives up to Jamie's house and crashes into a fence, destroying her family's Christmas decorations. Chris returns home in embarrassment, and Jamie follows him; she tells him she's not crazy and they end up spending the night together catching up and looking at the pictures. However, due to Chris' continuing lack of approval, the two ended up just sleeping and nothing was happening that night. The next day Jamie talks to Darla about last night, while Chris goes to Clark's dental office for advice, her fear that Chris's lack of affection means he doesn't like her. Jamie admits that while the two are just friends, she tried to show Chris that she is interested in the relationship. Clark tells Chris that time was wrong and the story of Jamie and Chris prevents him from being willing to have sex with her. Outside the office, they accidentally catch Dusty singing sexy nurse and then kissing her. Dusty reveals to Chris and Clark that he only plans to have sex with Jamie, as he wants to humiliate her just as he felt she used to humiliate him when he was a nerd and she was the object of his love. Chris tries to warn Jamie, but instead ends up attacking Dusty in front of her; Jamie refuses to listen when Chris tries to explain. Chris, therefore, gets drunk and goes to the bar where Jamie works, finding her there with Dusty. Jamie refuses to listen and Dusty tries to convince her to have sex with him. When Jamie gently turns him down, Dusty storms out of the bar. Chris and Jamie get into another fight, accusing her of keeping him in the 'friends zone' and that it will never lead to anything. Jamie punches Chris, and he's thrown out of the bar. Bar. Back in Los Angeles and having a frightening reunion with Samantha, Chris realizes that Jamie is his only true love. He returns to New Jersey, where he declares his romantic love for Jamie for her and the two share a kiss, while the three children (from a hockey game earlier) look in disgust.
