The film was released in Hong Kong on April 3, 1998. Plot In Hong Kong, a mysterious hitman, known as the King of The Killers, killed a wealthy former criminal authority yakuza named Tsukamoto. Since Tsukamoto established a revenge fund in the case of murder, the king received a $100 million reward. The late hungry grandson, Eiji, becomes the new head of the Tsukamoto family and one of the bounty hunters. A former soldier named Fu is part of a small gang that learns about the award. Fu tries to enter the building, where Tsukamoto's lawyers discuss the terms of the revenge fund, but is rebuffed by the security services. When he defends himself, his martial arts skills attract the attention of Lo, a seedy petty criminal. Law is also looking for an award for King Killers, and agrees to hire Fu as his muscle. Inspector Chan, a member of the Hong Kong Security Bureau, warns them not to pursue the case. To test Fu's abilities, Lo takes on a small contract to kill a local gang member, as well as equipping Fu and allowing him to live in his home. Fu soon meets Kiki, The Daughter of Lo, who is a successful lawyer and is ashamed of her father's sleazy activities. Martin, the chief lawyer in charge of the Tsukamoto Revenge Fund, makes the discovery that before his death, the criminal lord was forced to swallow old Chinese military promissory notes. He sells this information to bounty hunters, and since Eiji is willing to pay the highest amount, he will be the first to know the serial codes on the banknotes. Fu and Lo follow Eiji to a small apartment complex where they learn that the suspect is an old man named Uncle Leung, an acquaintance of Law, whom he had previously sought. Despite their best efforts, they fight several yakuza killers and a Caucasian killer wielding a grenade disguised as a priest, whom Fu kills with his own grenade. Fu and Lo are unable to extract Leung, who suffers from a heart attack and dies during the escape, and then shot him in the head. In Law's apartment, Law comes clean with Fu: Years ago, he met Uncle Leung, and in conversation with him learned the old man was a veteran whose entire family was killed by the Japanese during the Second Sino-Japanese War. Now Leung wanted to take revenge on his family's killers, but the only wealth he possessed was the notes. After taking pity on him, Law told Leung to hold on to the notes and, in the case of the murder of the Japanese, whom he wanted to kill, cash them and move the money into his bank account. Law only recently learned that Tsukamoto was the man Leung wanted to kill, and as soon as the criminal lord was killed by the king of the killers, Leung did what Locke asked for, and sent the money from the banknotes to Law's bank account. This created a paper trail that involved Law as king. Before Fu and Lo plan on, their apartment will suddenly be attacked by two bounty hunters. They can barely escape, and Law plans to disappear into mainland China. Before leaving, however, they decide to attend Kiki's prom. At the event, Fu once again meets Inspector Chan and betrays that the inspector is actually the real king when he slips that he knows Law is not really a wanted killer. Fu and Lo then go to Eiji's penthouse to meet Martin, where Fu shoots Lo and demands to cash in on the generosity. Martin, however, informs them that Eiji has changed the terms of the fund so that no matter who kills the king, he will be the one who receives the money. A mass brawl takes place in the penthouse, and soon Inspector Chan arrives as the king to help Fu and Lo. They can kill Eiji and all his men, leaving Martin to rewrite the terms of the foundation. Later they can be seen together, sharing money and discussing their plans for the future. Chan retires and recruits Fu as the new king. Starring Jet Li as Fu, the film's protagonist, is an extremely experienced melee fighter but also a naive and inexperienced killer in training who eventually becomes the new King Simon Yam as Officer Chang Kwan, a capable and determined detective who is actually a dangerous avenger king of killers alter ego Eric Tsang, as Ngoc Lo, a self-proclaimed rat bastard who makes rent by any means to Kiki , Ngoka Lo's daughter, A smart and handsome lawyer who is irritated by the misdeeds of his father Sato Keiji as Eiji Tsukamoto, a ruthless and focused member of the yakuza who seeks an award for his grandfather's killer Paul Rapovsky as a tall guy, a leading bodyguard of Tsukamoto and an experienced, if not cheap, fighter Kw Ipong Kim as Martin, a lawyer in charge of the revenge fund who is not a Japanese karate practitioner. like Tsukamoto, the sleazy and famous former yakuza boss who King at the beginning of the film Timmy Ho as David Wu, the detective in charge of the search and exposing King Jing Tung as Kau, a small-town triad lieutenant who was briefly the boss of Fu Frankie Ng, as the father of the amusement park, who is mistakenly considered the king of the release of October 16, 2000, the DVD was released by Hong Kong Legends in the United Kingdom in Region 2. Five years later, The Jet Li Collection was released on July 25, 2005, on two discs, including The Master. In 2002, an edited version of the hip-hop soundtrack was released on DVD in the United States as Contract Killer. Variety's Derek Alley called it a mixture of comedy and above-average action.
