Shaw library Ise

Shaw Library Shaw Library in the 1950s Shaw Library, or founding room, is a general purpose library and common room at the London School of Economics and Political Science. Located on the sixth floor of the Old Building, the library is available to all university members. It was founded and named after Charlotte Payne-Townshend Shaw, wife of playwright George Bernard Shaw. [1] [2] The library includes Fabian Window, a stained glass window designed by George Bernard Shaw. Despite all the obstacles posed to you in 2020, you succeeded. To a new city (maybe), to a new university (probably) and ready for the next exciting new chapter of your life (hopefully). But for those moving to London, you are now faced with the mammoth task of decorating your new home, probably for the first time. Not sure where to start? Don't worry! We are here to assure you that you can make your new apartment more than a place to rest your head at night. You can make it a place that feels at home. Your home. And it's all achievable on the student budget. Before we go any further... All students have a role to play in keeping themselves and the rest of the LSE community safe. This is not only applicable when you are on campus or in LSE premises, it also applies to when you are off campus as well. That is why the recommended guidelines and advice should be followed at all times, including, but not limited to: keeping a safe distance, wearing recommended protective equipment and practicing good hygiene and sanitation. We advise all students to check the freshest advice and government guidelines and follow them when acquiring items for your new homes. Many retailers and outlets have set up practices to support safe visits from their customers, so we recommend watching on their websites before visiting. Most likely, there will be safety precautions that you will need to take before visiting and practice that you will need to follow during your visit, so make sure you are aware of this and follow them when visiting stores, retailers and outlets. It is important that all our students are safe, especially those at high risk. To find out if you fall into the high risk category and for more information about the precautions you should take, click here. Here are some of our best tips! Second hand doesn't have to mean second best! Student accommodation often comes furnished or partially furnished, so check your gyms or rental agreement to find out. you have to buy some furniture, why not buy used? Not only is it more affordable, it's sustainable! And you will be surprised how good the condition of some used items is - really true what they say, one person's garbage is another person's treasure! Finding second-hand items has never been easier - buy from fellow LSE students at our exclusive LSESU market on Paperclip or check out Gumtree and Facebook Marketplace to find items in your area. In addition, you can set up with a little Upcycling project! Grab some paint, varnish and sandpaper and you can turn an old unit into a stylish work of art! Read more here on how to start with Upcycling. Teamwork makes a dream work For not to organize a group trip to Ikea? For all of you who don't know, Ikea is a place for furniture and homewares. Get lost with your new roommates in Ikea's infamous store maze and test who has the best flat pack assembly skills! Trust us, with Ikea products, these skills will come in handy... (everything needs to be put together!) Of course, you will need to ensure that you arrange trips only with people with whom government guidelines allow you to go, such as those within your household or bubbles. It is also important to remember to follow the recommended tips, including keeping a safe distance from other customers and practicing good hygiene and sanitation when in the store. Check out Ikea's website for their security practices. Revive your walls There's no money for Monet? No problem. You don't have to spend a fortune to enjoy art in your new home. Prints can be expensive. So why don't you try to make your own? From floral to geometric to motivational quotes, you'll find stacks of fancy wrapping paper or postcards in stores like Paperchase. If you're more of a music lover, search your local charity shop or record store to find cover shoots from your favorite artists. Find a few that you like, slot them into the box (Ikea, Amazon, Wilko or charity shops are great places to look for frames) and voila! - an expensive work of art for a fraction of the price. Small independent companies sometimes offer affordable printouts through websites like etsy or watch out for billboard sales in the Saw Swee Hock building (Your Students' Union - that's us! Create your own art! We have the best way to start this. Visit the LSESU website and be sure to attend the Virtual Welcome Fair to find artistic societies and events! Of course, you're going to need a way to hang your art. Most lease agreements don't allow you to put a blue tack on your walls, so here are some alternative ideas: If you don't already have hooks, you may be able to negotiate with your landlord or agent to set them up, so try starting this conversation you feel comfortable. The command image of the hanging tape claims that they leave no damage to the But be sure to do your research and read some user reviews to help your mind before buying. Magnetic posters allow you to hang posters without a blue tack - this is another one to explore! Cover yourself with comfortable carpets, duvet covers, toasts and throws - these are all great investments that with minimal effort can add a splash of color and personality to your room. Better yet, you can use them to wrap warmly on those cold winter nights. Brrrrr! And if you like them - why shouldn't you? To your taste... AND THEY DID. Pleasant! - there is no reason not to be followed in the next move. Ikea, Wilko, Primark and Amazon are some good places to start! Bring on the outside Not only do plants look great, but research suggests that indoor plants can also improve well-being and productivity. You can consider a low maintenance cactus that is likely to survive university holidays or herbs for the added benefit of edible (consider basil for Italian recipes, mint mint and mojitosu or chili if you like to live life on the wild side!). Illuminate it Light! can study or relax, the right lighting can set the mood. Invest in fairy lights and a night lamp to create a dimly lit, relaxing environment or table light when you need to focus on your studies. Changing the eyeshadow in the main light can change how bright your room is, but it also allows you to ease your personality on your space! Home is where the heart! goes without saying that decorating your new home with photos of your friends and family and personal memories can help you feel more at home. Are you stuck where to put them? If the frames aren't really your thing, you can try to put them on a pinboard or put them on a piece of wire or ribbon Replace it Rearranging your furniture is a zero-cost way to make the space work for you. Whether you've decided to adopt the feng shui principles or simply want to be able to access that clumsily placed plug, occasionally moving things around can have the added effect of rejuvenating your room completely... Free! Do you have any other suggestions? Better yet, you have pictures of how you made your new home more of you? We'd love to see them!
