Since April 1922, the Sheridan VAMC has been a mental health care and primary care facility for men and women who have served their country. In 1898, the grounds that are now the Sheridan VAMC were set aside by President William McKinley to be a military fort. The fort was named after Brigadier General Ranald Slidell Mackenzie. The first troops to the fort in 1901 were Buffalo Soldiers who used the fort for rest and retraining. By World War II, the fort was closed and ready for demolition. However, former President Taft, who after leaving office, could be appointed to the Supreme Court, could get the fort transferred to the Bureau of Health as a hospital for men coming home from WWI with battle madness or who are known as PTSD today The hospital opened in April 1922 as a 300 bed facility. By the end of World War II, the facility had 900 beds. Today, the Sheridan VAMC has 208 beds and serves nearly 12,500 Veterans Veterans Medical Center boasts eight Community-based outpatient clinics, strategically located across Wyoming.
