While the identity of Tamil Brahmins and their conflict with dalits in the state is much discussed in political circles, the Quora thread neatly sums up the cause of all the turmoil among communities in Tamil Nadu. While the identity of Tamil Brahmins and their conflict with dalits in the state is much discussed in political circles, the Quora thread seeks neatly sums up the cause of confusion among communities in Tamil Nadu. Answer to the question: Why is there so much hatred against brahmins in Tamil Nadu? Quora user from Chennai, Sagaran explains the problem. According to him, brahmin's community is misunderstood and other Hindu castes have placed their blame on brahmins because they are not fighting back. Sagaran, who is a Dalit himself, explains that brahmins are shy castes and that they should unite with dalits. He advises fellow Dalits to be wary of brahmin baiting non-Brahmin caste Hindus. This particular thread has received a lot of chatter on social media. Here's a reproduction of the post: As a Tamil Dalit, my friends who were Brahmin lyers were the only ones who didn't question my caste. Everyone else like Thevars and Mudaliars criticized the Dalits without knowing which caste I belonged to. Later they tried to randomly speak behind our Brahmin friends' backs, saying things like Ah those brahmins promoted castes. This is a typical pattern used by non-Brahmin Caste Hindus and every Dalit should be careful not to fall into this trap. Representational image. By Reuters It is not difficult to reverse this interpolation into history. Probably, as some say (and I don't care much about religious texts of any faith) caste was based on occupation not birth. The guardians of the rituals were the Brahmins, but the powerful ones were the decisions, and the commercial castes. It is very easy to imagine timid Brahmins being threatened by these powerful ruling castes to turn this story into one of birth. I use shy not in a negative way, but only because brahmins are not proud of aggression, a trait that I see to this day. Somehow, I'm not convinced that the entire caste Hindu population have been asked to be casting Brahmins, who still are only 3 percent of the population. Kshatriyas and Vaishyas are an intelligent bunch. Do you think they would blindly listen to a minority? For a poor priest, it doesn't matter if dalit gives him rupees or Devar gives him rupees. Caste, however, is important for a powerful landowner who works in the country for cheap. The never-ending supply of cheap glued labour is what they needed. Check out caste based violence committed against Dalits. Vitriolic attacks on Dalits usually come from non-brahmin castes. Devars, Vanniyars and Gounders have taken over the mantle to attack the Dalits. Brahmins on the other hand rarely (if ever) take a look at violence. I saw brahmins married into the Arundhathiyar family and coexist peacefully. I have a friend married to Brahmin's wife and the family rallies around him as if he were their own. Again, these are personal examples and cannot be applied to all situations. Read the full Quora thread here. Its owner, Quora Inc., is based in Mountain View, California, United States. The company was founded in June 2009, and the website was made available to the public on June 21, 2010. [5] Users can collaborate by editing questions and proposing edits to responses submitted by other users. [6] In 2020, 590 million unique people visited the website per month. [7] The History of Founding and Naming Adam D'Angelo, photographed in 2011 by Charlie Cheever, photographed in 2009 by Quora was co-founded by former Facebook employees Adam D'Angelo and Charlie Cheever in June 2009. [3] In response to a question how did Adam D'Angelo and Charlie Cheever come up with the name Quora? wrote on Quora in 2011, Charlie Cheever stated, We spent several hours brainstorming and writing all the thoughts that we might think. After consulting with friends and removing those we didn't like, we narrowed it down to 5 or 6 finalists and eventually settled on Quora. [8] Cheever went on to say: The closest competition that [name] Quora was The Ching. [8] 2010-2013: Early Growth In March 2010 Quora, Inc. valued at USD 86 million. [5] Quora first became public June 21, 2010, and was praised for its interface and for the quality of responses written by its users, many of whom were recognized as experts in their [5] Quora Quora User Base quickly, and in late December 2010, the site was seen tipped by visitors five to ten times its usual load—so much so that the website initially had trouble handling increased traffic. [9] By 2018 quora did not appear to have punched ads because ... ads can often be negative for the user experience. No one likes banner ads, ads from dubious companies or ads that aren't relevant to their needs. [3] In June 2011 quora revamp the navigation and usability of its website. [10] Co-founder Adam D'Angelo compared the revamped Quora to Wikipedia, and stated that changes to the website were made based on what worked and what didn't when the website experienced unprecedented growth six months earlier. [10] In September 2012, co-founder Charlie Cheever resigned as a co-founder of the company, taking up an advisory role. [11] The second co-founder, Adam D'Angelo, continued to maintain a high degree of control over the company. [3] In January 2013, Quora launched a blog platform that allows users to post content that has not responded. [12] Quora also launched a full-text search for questions and answers on its website 20. [14] In May 2013, it also announced that usage metrics had tripled compared to the same period the previous year. [15] In November 2013, Quora introduced a feature called Statistics, which allows all Quora users to view aggregated and detailed statistics on how many people viewed, invoked, and shared their questions and answers. [16] [17] TechCrunch stated that although Quora had no immediate plans to monetize, they believed that search ads were likely to be their potential source of revenue. [18] 2014-2017: Continued growth and new features Google search popularity for Quora. 2012-2017 2014 Quora has evolved into a more organized Yahoo Answers, classier Reddit, stubborn Wikipedia and has become popular in technology circles. [3] In April 2014, Quora raised $80 million from Tiger Global for a reported $900 million valuation. [19] [20] Quora was one of the summer 2014 Y Combinator companies [21], although it was described as the oldest Y-Combinator ever. [22] Parlio Acquisition In March 2016 Quora acquired the Parlio online community website. [23] Ad Rollout Quora launched a limited ad rollout on the site in April 2016. [24] The first ad placement accepted by the company was from Uber. [3] Over the next few years, the site began to show more ads over the next few years, but it continues to try to limit the number of ads it showed and keep the ads it showed relevant to users who saw them. [3] Multilingual extension Quora launched the Spanish version of its website to the public in October 2016; [25] beginning 2017, the beta version of Quora was announced in French. [26] Betas in German and Italian were introduced in May 2017. [27] In September 2017, in Japanese has been launched. [28] Betas in Hindi, Portuguese and Indonesian were launched in April 2018. [29] In September 2018 Quora announced that further versions were planned in Bengali, Marathi, Tamil, Telugu, Finnish, Norwegian, Swedish and Dutch. [30] In 2017, quora announced changes to their anonymity functions, separation of anonymous questions and account adjustments. When you ask or answer anonymously, an anonymous edit link is generated so that the question or answer can be edited in the future. [31] [32] Since then, commenting anonymously and toggling his response between anonymous and public is no longer possible. These changes shall enter into force on the 20th day following the date of publication of this Decision. In the meantime, users could request a list of anonymous links to edit their existing anonymous questions and answers. [33] Funding for series D for 2017 Quora claimed to have 190 million unique visitors per month, 100 million more than the year before. That same month, Quora was reported to have received Series D funding with a valuation of $1.8 billion. [34] 2018-present: Further growth and data breach In September 2018, Quora stated that it receives 300 million unique visitors each month. [3] [34] Despite the large number of registered users, Quora did not have the same level of mainstream cultural dominance as the site as Twitter, which at the time had approximately 326 million registered users. [3] [35] This could have been because a large number of registered users on the site did not use them regularly and many didn't even know they had accounts because they either created unwisely through other social media sites associated with Quora or created them years earlier and forgot about them. [35] [36] Quora uses a pop-up window and interscutes to force users to log in or sign up before they see more content, similar to a measurad payroll. [37] In December 2018, Quora reported that approximately 100 million user accounts were affected by the data breach. [35] [38] The hacked information included users' names, email addresses, encrypted passwords, data from social networks like Facebook and Twitter if people decided to link them to their quora accounts, the questions they asked, and the answers they wrote. [38] Adam D'Angelo said: The vast majority of the content accessed has already been made public on Quora, but the compromise of the account and other private information is serious. By May 2019, Quora was valued at $2 billion as a company and is completing a $60 million investment round led by Valor Equity Partners, a private equity firm with ties to Tesla, Inc. and SpaceX. [3] Nevertheless, the site still showed very few ads compared to other sites of its kind, and the company was still trying to turn a profit, as it generated sales of only $20 million in 2018. [3] Several handed over to the opportunity to invest in Quora, citing the company's poor results of actually making money. [3] Schleifer characterized the differences between quora's valuation as a company and its actual profits due to the high valuation of virtually everything in the technology sector these days. In December 2019, Quora announced that it would open its first international engineering office in Vancouver to deal with engineering training and other engineering functions. [39] In the same month, Quora launched its Arabic, Gujarati, Hebrew, Kannada, Malayalam, and Telugu versions. [40] The URL operation url format questions contain only the name of the question without a numeric identifier, as used on stackexchange pages (except the URL of the snail) and /unanswered/ before the name if the question is unanswered. User interface Asynchronous JavaScript and XML make some site features resemble IM, such as updating the number of follow-up messages and an indicator that shows that the user is writing a response. [41] Quora's real name policy requires users to register with their real names in full and not with an internet pseudonym (screen name); [42] Although name verification is not necessary, the community can report false names. This was done with the seeming intention of adding credibility to the response. Users with a certain activity on a website have the option to write their replies anonymously, but not by default. [citation needed] Visitors who do not want to log in or use cookies must have taken a look at the solutions to use the site. [43] Users can also sign in with their Google or Facebook accounts using OpenID. The Quora community includes various well-known personalities such as Jimmy Wales, Richard A. Muller, Clayton C. Anderson, Barack Obama, Hillary Clinton and Adrián Lamo.[44][45], as well as some current and former professional athletic personalities, scientists and other professionals in their fields. Quora allows users to create user profiles with visible real names, photos, site usage statistics, etc., which users can set to private. In August 2012, blogger Ivan Kirigin pointed out that acquaintances and followers could see his activity, including the issues he looked at. [46] In response, Quora stopped showing views on issues in newsfeeds later that month. [47] Quora exposes the profiles of its users, including their real names, to search engines by default. Users can turn off this feature. [48] Quora's response recommendation has developed its own custom response rating algorithm that works much like Google PageRank. [49] Quora uses Amazon Elastic Compute Cloud technology to host servers running on its website. [50] [51] Quora currently has different ways of recommending questions:[52] Recommendations for home feed issues In this method, users have a timeline that is customized to their Quora also provides interesting questions that are relevant to these preferences. Daily digest In this method, Quora sends a daily email containing a set of questions with one answer, which is considered the best answer, due to certain rating criteria. Related questions This method displays a set of questions on the side of the question that apply to the current question. This screen is not customized for a specific user. Required answers This feature allows the user to direct the question to other users whom he considers more appropriate to answer. Quora Content Moderation supports various features for moderating user-published content. Most content moderation is by users, although employees can also intervene. Upvote and downvote Users can rank responses based on how relevant or useful they found the answers to be. This feature is designed to maintain the quality of content posted online. The more upvotes the answer gets, the higher it is sorted, and it appears on top of the search related to the question. If the answer is sorted wrong, it is collapsed and will not appear in people's channels. [53] Reply to a message Users can report plagiarism, harassment, spam and factually incorrect articles, etc. The aim is to keep substandard content under control. [53] Suggest edits Users suggest changes to the response. The proposed changes are made more obvious to the author of the reply, who can either approve (and publish them) or reject them. [53] Edit question and source Users can directly edit the question. These changes are reviewed by Quora Moderation, which can return them if they are considered non-destructive. Top Writers Program In November 2012, Quora introduced the Top Writers program as a way to recognize individuals who have made particularly valuable content posts on the web and encourage them to continue. About 150 writers were selected each year. Top writers were invited to occasional exclusive events and received gifts such as designer clothing items and books. The company believed that cultivating a group of key users who were particularly invested in the site would generate positive feedback on user engagement. [54] Quora World Meetup Quora World Meetup began in 2017 as a tradition for Quora readers and writers to communicate and network. Quora World Meetups are organized by a group of Quora contributors with a designated lead and as a post from Quora usually send branded swag and stickers to participants. [55] According to Quora, they defined World Meetups as our way of celebrating the global growth of Quora, and all the readers and writers who made it possible. [55] Nearly 2000 writers from more than cities met in 2017. The 2018 World Cup took place between June 20 and June 25. [55] In April 2018, quora's Partner Programme presented a programme that offers incentives for users Questions. [56] [56] program, selected only by invitation, are paid via Stripe or PayPal, based on user involvement and advertising revenue generated by the questions. According to the affiliate program FAQ, questions are compensated based on user engagement and the advertising revenue they generate. When you ask the question, you will earn money on it for 1 year. [57] This programme has been criticised by some Member States who feel that financial incentives have led to the mass publication of lower quality issues that have damaged the original concept of the site. Founder Adam D'Angelo tried to address some of this criticism. [58] Spaces In November 2018, Quora discontinued support for user blogs and introduced a new feature called Spaces. [59] Spaces are communities of like-minded people in which users can discuss and share content related to a space topic or subject. Space is a Quora site that has its own administrators, moderators, contributors, and followers. The space is controlled by administrators. Moderators can add or remove content and approve or reject posts to the space. Contributors can add content such as posts, external links to websites, or Quora's questions and answers. Once the space has gained a certain number of followers, Quora allows the space administrator to add its own URL, starting with q/. In June 2020, Quora announced that owners of premises in several eligible countries would be able to receive a share of the revenue from ads displayed on their premises. [60] Reception Reviews Quora was extensively reviewed by the media in 2010. [61] [62] [63] According to Robert Scoble, Quore managed to combine the attributes of Twitter and Facebook. [64] Later, in 2011, Scoble criticized Quora for being a terrible blogging service, and although a decent question and answer website is not significantly better than alternatives. [65] Since 2014, Quora has attracted ongoing controversy for using robots.txt instructing crawlers such as internet archive Wayback Machine to index or archive pages. [66] [67] Quora's reason given is that the Wayback Machine API does not give users a way to censor responses that they may regret previously posting. [66] [67] Critics have raised concerns about the fate of Quora content if the site ever goes offline and recommended Stack Overflow as an easily archived alternative. [66] [67] Quora was heavily criticised in August 2017 for removing the details of the issues. According to some users, removing details of issues limited the ability to submit personal questions and questions requiring code snippets, multimedia, or complexity of any kind that would not fit within the length limit for URLs. [68] [69] According to the official product update notice, the removal of details of the issues was carried out in order to highlight canonical issues. [70] The lawsuit was brought in retirement on 1 January 2020 americky professor Rima Najjar Merriman. Merriman, proceedings against Quora in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California. Her lawsuit alleged that she was wrongly banned from the Question and Answer website and accused of posting hate speech for her pro-Palestinian and anti-Zionist views. [71] [72] On March 23, 2020, Merriman filed an application for voluntary dismissal of her lawsuit against Quora without admitting guilt. [73]. Her lawyers cited as a reason for withdrawing recent court rulings that immunize technology companies for acts of censorship and discrimination whether or not these activities constitute unlawful discrimination or restriction of legitimate speech ... Specifically, the Communications Decency Act (CDA) has been interpreted by recent cases in the Northern District of California to give Trump federal civil rights laws as well as UNRUH protections against discrimination based on political opinion.
