Guadalupe Hidalgo was the east and south boundary of the United States. In 1848, Mexico ceded all of the territory north of the Rio Grande and south of the 31st parallel to the United States, including present-day California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, and parts of Colorado and Wyoming. This treaty, known as the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, was signed on February 2, 1848, and ended the Mexican War.

The treaty was signed in Mexico City and was accepted by the United States government in the presence of President James K. Polk. The treaty was ratified by both the United States Senate and the Mexican Congress. The terms of the treaty were harsh for Mexico and included the payment of $15 million in gold to the United States, the loss of a significant amount of territory, and the agreement to respect the territorial boundaries of the new United States.

The treaty was seen as a triumph for the United States and a blow to Mexico. It marked the end of Mexican territory in the present-day United States and opened the door to further expansion. The treaty also had significant implications for the future of slavery in the United States, as it prompted the political and social debates that would lead to the Civil War.

about the treaty guadalupe hidalgo, establishing the boundaries between mexico and the u.s. based on the determination of the mexican and u.s. representatives. The treaty guadalupe hidalgo was signed on February 2, 1848, at villa de guadalupe hidalgo to end the war between the two countries.

The treaty guadalupe hidalgo included several key points:

1. Mexico ceded vast land to the u.s., including california.
2. The u.s. agreed to pay mexico $15 million in gold for the land ceded.
3. The boundary between the u.s. and mexico was to be the rio grande.

The treaty guadalupe hidalgo was a contentious issue in the u.s., with various factions expressing opinions on its terms. The treaty was ratified by both the u.s. and mexican legislatures, but its consequences were felt for decades to come.
