.. not by the typical bad guy, but by a small creature with a face that can be best described as a mixture between a frog and a dog. He's a "salt frog" and he escaped from a vat of salt where he was being prepared for a medieval dinner. Now this homeless frog is trying to get Bjorn to his home. It's a unique premise and a unique character, so while Bjorn is obsessed with finding a way to bring the salt frog home, he is also obsessed with solving the mystery of his name. Demetrios has been compared to Where's Waldo? and The Masked Singer. Plot In 17th century Paris, the home of Bjorn Thonen, a small creature is robbed by a large, sharp-fanged creature. This creature turns out to be an escaped salt frog named Demetrios, whose owner was a type of toad. Salt frogs are creatures that live in a salt pool, and have skin and eyes that are identical to the salt. Salt water is the only food they can eat, and they are only able to move when they are immersed in water. Bjorn is a slob of a collector who loves antique items, and has a room full of old junk and trinkets. He's horrified to find the salt frog in his room and confronts it, demanding the thief return the frog. A meeting between Bjorn and Demetrios is planned. However, as Bjorn is en route to the meeting, he is robbed a second time by the same person, in the same way. This time, the thief is dressed as a woman, and asks for the frog to be sent to the home of the King of France. Bjorn sees this as an opportunity to take the frog to the king, and he makes up an elaborate story about a salt frog that is both a frog and a dog. The thief doesn't seem to care whether the story is true or not, as she plans to kidnap Bjorn and ransom the frog for money. As Bjorn and the frog make their way to the king's home, they are able to gain the attention of the French court. As they wait to be invited to meet the king, they meet a family of frogs, and Bjorn decides to invite them for a dinner. The family declines, as they are salt-fry-eater frogs, but a few minutes later, an animal-petting show arrives. One of the animals was 520fdb1ae7
