Directv h24-200 specs

As a DirecTV subscriber who recently moved into a new home, I had the chance to put those DirecTV commercials to the test. Would it really be a hassle-free experience? In fact, it was. I called DirecTV to inform them of my move, scheduled a date for the new dish installation (a Sunday, at that), packed up my H20 receiver and HR21 HD DVR, and went on my way. The commercials hint at free equipment upgrades, so I made a point to ask about this during the call. What I got was a free upgrade from the H20 to an HR24 HD DVR, as long as I was willing to agree to a new two-year commitment (which I was). Additional Resources The installation was quick and painless, performed by two courteous DirecTV installers. My previous install required the running of two lines to the HR21 in order to get the dual-tuner functionality. This time around, thanks to DirecTV's Single Wire Multiswitch (aka SWiM) technology, the installers were able to run a single coaxial cable to each set-top box, which allowed them to use the house's existing wiring. I'm now enjoying a two-DVR household; should I choose to pay $3 per month to add the Whole-Home DVR service, I could record different content on each box and watch it on whichever box I choose. As I write this, I've spent about a week and a half with the HR24, and I'm quite pleased with it. The HR24 has a 500GB hard drive and, as I alluded to above, dual tuners to record two shows simultaneously or watch one show while you record another (over-the-air ATSC tuners are not included). Its functionality and user interface are essentially the same as I described in my previous write-up on the HR23, but the new box does have a few notable differences. The HR23 used wide-band tuners that allow you to tune in the complete HD channel lineup without the addition of the small B-Band Converter box that sits between the coaxial cable and the receiver; from many reports I've seen, the HR23 was quite slow as a result. The HR24 does not use the wide-band tuners, so you will need the B-Band boxes if you have a non-SWiM installation. (Because I have a SwiM install, I don't need B-Band boxes for the HR24 or my old HR21.) Having never used the HR23, I can't say how the HR24's speed compares with its direct predecessor, but I can tell you that the new box is much faster--in channel changing and guide navigation--than the HR21. The HR24 also has a smaller form factor and a new, more stylish aesthetic. Gone are the hard buttons of previous models, replaced with a completely smooth front panel with touch-sensitive controls for guide, menu, record, resolution, navigation, and select, as well as lights to indicate resolution. The access card hides behind a panel on the right, and a USB port hides behind a panel on the left, to which you can attach the optional AM21 tuner module for over-the-air HD tuning (this port does not support media playback, wireless networking, or external USB hard drives). The back panel offers one HDMI, one component video, one S-video, and one composite video output, as well as both optical and coaxial digital audio outs. A single Ethernet port is included to add the box to your home network, which is necessary for ordering VOD titles. The HR24 also offers internal support for the DirecTV Ethernet Coaxial Adapter (DECA)--which is DirecTV's implementation of MoCA technology--so you have the option of networking directly through the coaxial cable. Other back-panel connections include a phone jack, a second USB port, and an eSATA port to add a larger hard drive. The RC65R remote has the standard DirecTV look and layout. It lacks backlighting but supports IR and RF control (the RF antenna is built into the HR24). DirecTV has added two-way programming capability that allows the HR24 to automatically program the remote, making it very easy to add control of your TV and two additional AV devices. Click on over to Page 2 to readly all about the High Points, Low Points, Competition and Comparison and Conclusion. . . . High Points • The HR24 has a 500GB hard drive, with the option to add a larger hard drive via the eSATA port. • SWiM technology allows you to use a single coaxial cable and still get dual-tuner functionality. • The HR24 is much faster than previous DirecTV HD DVRs and has a more attractive design. • You can add the HR24 to your home network via Ethernet or DECA (MoCA) technology, to order DirecTV VOD and stream media from your computer. • This HD DVR is compatible with DirecTV's Whole-Home DVR service. • DirecTV offers an iPad app that allows you to control and manage your HD DVR. Low Points • This box does not feature a built-in wireless network connection, and the USB ports don't support wireless networking or media playback. • DirecTV does not support access to Internet services like Netflix, VUDU, Pandora, etc. • DirecTV does not currently allow you to watch live content through mobile devices--with one exception. NFL Sunday Ticket subscribers can view live games via their smartphone or iPad. Competition and Comparison Compare the DirecTV HR24 with its competition by reading the reviews for the AT&T U-verse DVR and Service, TiVo Premiere HD DVR, and Moxi HD DVR. Learn more about HD DVRs by visiting our Satellite Receiver and HD DVR Reviews section. ConclusionThus far, I'm very happy with my new HR24. Its primary advantages over previous DirecTV HD DVRs are its speed and its smaller, more attractive design. Of course, I got mine as a free upgrade, which always makes things easier to like. Are those perks enough to justify the $199 price tag if you aren't eligible for a free upgrade? Probably not...especially when we might see the fully loaded, RVU-enabled HMC30 HD DVR sometime this year. Still, if you're thinking of making the switch to DirecTV, I think you'll be pleased with the HR24 and with DirecTV's HD DVR service. It's logical, it's reliable, and--most importantly--DirecTV's picture quality is excellent. Check out our gallery of the Technological Rise of the AV Receiver at HomeTheaterReview.com below. . . . We ranked it as one of the top five DVRs in the industry because every DIRECTV plan comes with an included Genie DVR at no extra cost. If you're thinking about getting a Genie but aren't convinced it's as great as the hype suggests, keep reading. We'll break down each part of this whole-home DVR system, including details about the equipment hardware. Our goal is to give you a clear sense of what's superior and what's standard about the Genie so you can know what you're getting into. The Genie can support up to eight rooms with the same unit, thanks to its high-def receiver that connects to mini-clients. Please note that while you can include up to eight TVs as part of your system, the Genie can provide signal to only four at a time. The Genie comes in both HR44 and HR54 models. The major difference is how they power your satellite dish. The HR44 has an external SWiM power inserter, while the HR54's is built in. The SWiM inserter powers your satellite dish with such efficiency that the Genie earned ENERGY STAR certification. DIRECTV's DVR falls behind the competition in storage capacity. Both the HR44 and HR54 have only around 1 TB of storage (1,024 GB). This means you can record only 200 hours of HD programming (800 standard), so you may find yourself having to delete old recordings frequently. In comparison, DIRECTV's competitor DISH offers the Hopper 3 with 2 TB of storage—that's double the Genie's. But if DIRECTV can get its Genie 2 model off the ground, it may finally give the Hopper 3 a run for its money. See how DISH's Hopper 3 and DIRECTV's Genie compare. The Genie 2 HS17, or Genie Server, could be a game changer for DIRECTV. With 2 TB of storage, it has to the potential to take on the best DVR out there—the DISH Hopper 3. Unfortunately, customers have had trouble connecting the new Genie to the DIRECTV App. Without this connection, you can't watch your recordings on the go. But if you still want to experiment with it, the Genie 2 requires a one-time activation fee of $99.00, and the first Genie 2 Mini comes included in your service. During checkout, let your DIRECTV customer service representative know that you'd like the Genie 2 HS17 model. Based on availability, they can possibly set you up with this next generation of the DIRECTV DVR. The DIRECTV Genie remote is streamlined, with most of the navigation in the center. There are a bunch of helpful features that will make your watching experience easier: Turn TV and DVR on and off together Press "R" button to automatically record show Press "R" button twice to record entire series "Replay" button skips back 6 seconds "Advance" button fast-forwards 30 seconds This remote also comes with both infrared and radio frequency capabilities, which means you don't need to worry about having line of sight to your DVR to turn it on or change the channel. DIRECTV has both basic and backlit versions of the Genie remote and provides them based on availability. If you need the backlit version and DIRECTV doesn't have it, you can pick one up on Amazon for about $30.00. To configure the setup that best fits your home, DIRECTV offers both wired and wireless mini-clients. These petite units can be tucked away discreetly, enabling the Genie to extend service without giant eyesore receivers all over your home. When you hook up Genie Minis to secondary TVs, you're free to wander into the kitchen to cook dinner and resume that episode of Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives that made you hungry in the first place. Unlike DIRECTV's DVR, Genie Minis aren't included in your service. Each device costs $7.00 per month. If you're planning on sticking with DIRECTV for a while, buy your own Genie Minis. It'll save money in the long run, and you can get both wireles and wired models on Amazon. DIRECTV packages from CHOICE™ on up come with a season of NFL SUNDAY TICKET™ at no extra cost. This gives you access to out-of-market NFL games each Sunday. With the Genie, you can create a "Mix Channel" to watch up to eight live sports programs at once. That's a pretty sweet deal for sports fans—better than trying to fit eight TVs in your living room, for sure. If you love the cutting edge, know that DIRECTV offers select shows, sports, and on-demand movies in 4K Ultra HD. This is the highest visual quality available right now, and you can experience it if you have a 4K-capable TV and the Genie DVR in model HR54 or higher. DIRECTV is the clear winner when it comes to 4K in the TV provider market because it offers 4K content all day long on channel 104. DISH and Xfinity are also 4K compatible, but neither have a dedicated 4K channel. The DIRECTV app works well with the Genie. You can stream DVR recordings in your home or download to watch on the go, and you can manage your recordings all from your phone. It even works as a remote, which is great for putting off the hunt for a misplaced Genie Remote for at least one day more. DIRECTV's DVR gets the job done without any extra charges. While it can record only five channels at once and up to 200 hours of HD content, it's great for 4K Ultra HD and good enough for on-the-go watching.
