In the late 1930s, wealthy 17-year-old Ellie Hamilton spends her summer vacation in Seabrook. Local worker Noah Calhoun meets Ellie at the carnival, and they soon fall in love. One day, Noah leads Ellie to an ancient house, which he dreams of buying and rebuilding, and they try to make love, but are interrupted by their friend. Ellie's parents disapprove of their romance, as Noah belongs to another social class, and they move with her to New York. Noah writes 365 letters (year) to Ellie, but her mother Anne Hamilton doesn't deliver them to her daughter. Three years later, the United States joins Co. of World War II and Noah and his best friend Fin enlist in the army, and Ellie works as an Army nurse. She meets wounded soldier Lon Hammond in the hospital. After the war, they meet each other again going on dates, and then, Lon, who is rich and beautiful, offers. Meanwhile Noah buys and restores the old house and many people want to buy it. When Ellie accidentally sees a photo of Noah and him at home in the newspaper, she feels divided between her first love and her engagement to Lon. Meanwhile, Duke stops reading to the old lady, as his children visit him in the nursing home.
