90s quiz game answers 31

One of my favorite things about going to the movies is walking around the lobby and looking at the frame, one sheet posters of upcoming movie releases. The pursuit of full-size new film posters is part of a theatrical experience that streaming channels can't quite replicate. Movie posters have a hard job of summing up the tone of the film, the story, and the appeal, all in one graphic. There are designs that have become classics like the Rocky Horror Picture Show lips or jaws floating right under a bikini-clad swimmer. But some movie posters - especially those from the 90s - may be a little misleading on the subject, or just don't seem to have a real purpose. These 31 90s movie posters seriously don't make sense, even if viewed today. It's not that all these movie posters are bad, for sure. (Although, let's be real: some of them are very much.) You may even see some of your favorites on this list - even images that have become iconic. But look at each of them individually. Really look and try to imagine that you know nothing about the movies they advertise. Could you blame an uninformed viewer for being confused? Keep clicking to see 31 movie posters from the 90s that still, to this day, make zero sense. Get all the best delicious recipes in your inbox! Sign up for a delicious newsletter today! Perhaps the most recognizable sitcom of all time, he follows a group of six friends living in New York. It made the star cast (Jennifer Aniston, Courteney Cox, Lisa Kudrow, Matt LeBlanc, Matthew Perry and David Schwimmer) enjoy a new set of (junior) fans when streaming on Netflix, was in the middle of a streaming war and, to the delight of what seems like the whole world, will be revived in the near future, courtesy of new streaming network HBO Max.
