Short Policy - The goal of our foreign employment policy (or part-time) extends to our employees who take on other jobs and also work with our company. While we tend to discourage external employment, we understand the need to supplement your income or desire to engage in interesting projects outside of your core job. We want to keep your work in our company from getting involved. This policy sets out our rules and regulations. This policy mainly applies to our full-time staff, including those who work flexible hours or compressed weeks of work. It also includes employees who work more than 25 hours a week. This policy applies to legitimate activities. Participation in illegal business (e.g. fraud, drug trafficking) will lead to an immediate termination. We may also sue if you use our company's equipment, resources or information to support any illegal activity. Elements of the policy Our company does not want to prevent its employees to moonlight. But we want our employees to be transparent about their side jobs, to make it easier for us to prevent conflicts with their core jobs. Our main rule is that our employees should treat their work in our company as their main profession. Any other work must be second. With this rule, our employees should not take on a job or project with our competitors. This may violate our non-competitive agreement and we can terminate you. Our privacy policy is always in place. Take a job or project if their working hours coincide with their main job. This will cause attendance problems and your manager can take disciplinary action. We expect you to use your working hours (not including breaks) to work only in our company unless otherwise allowed. Take on a job or project that is so demanding it interferes with basic responsibilities. For example, if you are too tired to do your main job properly, you will encounter negative performance reviews (formal and informal) and we may take disciplinary action. Take a job or project that can create a conflict of interest. For this reason, we do not recommend working for or outside of your core business. Starting a business that competes with our own is a conflict of interest if you continue to work for us while running your business. What if you want to do side-effects. We define beating as paid, regular work (temporary or permanent) with Responsibilities. For example, working in a coffee shop qualifies as a chore if you have to work there regularly, regardless of whether you have pre-determined shifts or a fixed number of hours. Managing a business, working as a consultant or consultant for companies and serving as a board member of the fall fall organization our definition too. If you want (or have taken) a side job, please tell your manager to help us make sure you are not violating this policy unintentionally. In addition, an honest discussion with your manager can help them understand why you need a second job and determine whether our company can help you instead (for example, give you more work time or exciting new projects.) You don't need to tell your manager what you are: Work in a friend's business or family sometimes on random days and hours. But, you still need to make sure that the hours you put into this work don't overlap with your core work, and that you will follow our privacy policy. Freelance. It doesn't qualify as a chore, because as a freelancer you can choose how many hours to work and when. But, we ask you to organize your time properly so that your projects and activities do not interfere with your core work. Our non-competitive agreement is worth it. Get a volunteer job. If you want to volunteer, make sure you don't have to work as usual. In addition, if your volunteer work becomes too demanding, we advise you to organize it better or reduce the time you want to volunteer. Managers' Responsibilities When team members inform their managers about their external work, managers must document this information. They should also check if any rules are broken. For example, a member of their team may unknowingly take up work with a competitor. If this happens, let your team member know so you can prevent a conflict of interest. Also, keep in mind that your team members may have other options besides taking out of employment if they are facing financial problems or looking for diversity in their work. It is your responsibility as a manager to find ways to help them if possible. If a member of your team tells you what they are thinking about taking on a side job because of financial problems, consider: If a member of your team is an hourly employee, you may be able to give them more hours of work with our company in addition to their income rather than them looking for additional work. Our Employee Assistance Program (EAP) may include financial advice for those who need help with planning their budget and expenses. Provide general information about our EAP to a member of your team and let them choose if they want to participate. If a member of your team is thinking about working outside the country because they want to promote their skills or career, you may be able to help them achieve this in our company. Discuss the chances of new projects, rotation of work or learning opportunities. Using the company's equipment and resources as employees must not use the company's equipment, resources or materials for their external activities. The use or disclosure of our confidential or confidential information outside the scope of your work with us is prohibited. However, we can for the equipment that we give employees for unlimited use, namely their work laptop and car company. In these cases you can use your equipment during working hours, but you have to follow our cybersecurity rules and the company's cars. Keep in mind that we will not reimburse the costs (such as gas) that you carry outside of working hours in our company. What if employees violate this policy? Our employees may be disciplined depending on how they have violated this policy. Violation of our non-competition and confidentiality agreements leads to immediate termination. We may also take legal action if you disclose confidential and confidential information about our employees, customers or businesses. If you violate this policy by showing attendance or performance problems due to your external employment, we can: Ask you to quit your job. Issue a reprimand and launch a progressive process of discipline. Stop you if we have come to the conclusion that you do not wish to comply with our policy after we have taken disciplinary action. Disclaimer: This policy is designed to provide general guidelines and should be used as a reference. It cannot take into account all relevant local, state or federal laws and is not a legal document. Neither the author nor Workable will assume any legal responsibility that may result from the use of this policy. Further reading Employees are entitled to moonlight? - Labor magazine In times of great sadness, people turn to movies to get their minds off their problems. For example, during the Great Depression, going to the movies played an important role in boosting morale that led to the Golden Age of Hollywood, and now, people are turning to movies as a liberation from all the fallout of political news. While movies can be great for raising people's spirits, they are also very useful for making you feel very, very sad. Sometimes you just need to let yourself feel depressed and have a good cleansing cry, and these are the most gut-wrenching movies to allow you to do so. For some people wanting to make themselves cry sounds strange, but in fact, it is not. Being able to empathize with others is part of what being human is all about, and it's also not great to bottle feelings or brush them away, either. In fact, sometimes it even feels good to trigger the release of emotions by watching a movie that is made to upset you so you can afford to explore and understand your own sources of sadness. Or perhaps the reason isn't that deep, and he just feels it's good to cry. That's okay, too. These films range from sad to heartbreaking, to utterly shocking, but they are all a great reminder that the human experience is not just a rainbow and the sun. Watching what inspires a visceral reaction is always worth it. Stepmom Stream is here. What begins as a light-hearted rivalry between mother and stepmother quickly becomes heavy when one they are diagnosed with cancer. You'll never be able to hear Ain't No Mountain High Enough in the same way again. The Moonlight Stream is here. This film won best film at the 2017 Oscars and for good reason as it touching features the immense adversity faced by its hero, Chiron.Stream Up here. For a children's film, Up is surprisingly sad. There are definitely fun and happy moments, but the emotional impact is much deeper than you might expect. The Goodwill Hunting Stream is here. This film was gut-wrenching even before Robin Williams died, and now it's even harder to get through without shedding a few (thousand) tears. The Weinstein Company/YouTubeStream Fruitvale station is here. This true story of the murder of Oscar Grant by the police on January 1, 2009 is hard to watch, but that's why it's so important. This film humanizes Grant and emphasizes the meaninglessness of his death, and it is a beautiful tribute and a call to action. The Weinstein Company/YouTubeStream Lion is here. This film tells the poignant story of a boy in India who is lost and ends up forever questioning what he left behind. It's a totally soulful movie, and perfect for watching when you need a good shout out. Okja is kind of like E.T., but more relevant as he criticizes GMOs and animal cruelty, and also makes you fall in love with Okja and its owner, Mija. P.S. I love you here. This movie is perfect to watch while heartbroken because it will take all your sad feelings and increase them once 10 times. It's equal parts of romance and tragedy, and that's what makes it so good. The flow of ordinary people is here. Mary Tyler Moore takes on a serious role in this film about a family struggling with the death of their son after a boat accident. It's jam-packed with feelings as each character handles their sadness differently. Stream Rabbit Proof fence here. As my girlfriend, this movie is particularly poignant because watching the sad things happen to kids reinforces all the feelings you have in doing so. The Rabbit Proof fence has many aspects of real life as well, making it even more gut-wrenching. The final cut for the Real/YouTubeStream Murder Act is here. This film takes the adage that truth is stranger than fiction to a new level when truth recreates the truth to create perceived fiction. Yes, it's confusing, but it explores some of the darkest crimes a person can commit in a fun way. While each of these films is great individually, it's probably not the best idea to watch them all in marathon style. You probably want to follow just one of them with light-hearted comedy, so plan accordingly. Accordingly. moonlighter weapon price guide
