Ambito social definicion pdf

From this author's point of view, social work is now mired in a deep crisis of identity; both nationally and internationally. This crisis is caused by various factors. Some of them: first, because the profile and functions of the social worker are not clear, vary depending on the specific work and needs of the organization in which it is framed, etc. Professional profiles such as social educator, sociocultural animator, social integrator, professional therapist, etc., newly born, who invade the field of intervention, which until now have been typical of social work. Areas of intervention, on the other hand, for which the social worker has not been properly formed. As a social worker, I see the need to clearly define employment and professional profile, no doubt identify the areas of intervention and roles that a social worker should perform. If we read the code of ethics, these clarifications are clearly blurred, are also subjected to ill-treatment by educational institutions that are not formed for the professional performance of these functions and which in practice do not support a clear and concise limitation of the scope of social work, moreover, instead they create disciplines that clearly invade the competences that have already been provided. Without defining in any of these disciplines neither a specific profile of work nor a difference with similar disciplines. Code of deontology. Article 2. General roles of graduates in the field of social work/social workers. Social workers are responsible for planning, projecting, calculating, applying, evaluating and changing social services and policies for groups and communities. They operate in many functional sectors, using a variety of methodological approaches, working in broad organizational areas and providing resources and benefits to different segments of the population at microsocial, intermediate social and macro-social levels. It follows: Information Research Preventive Promotion Promoting Mediation Planning Direction Assessments Oversight Training Lean and Interpret. That's what you should avoid, interpret. The subject's social environment consists of his living and work conditions, the research he has studied, the level of his income and the community of which he is a part. Each of these factors affects human health: that's why the world differences between the environment countries create health disparities. Thus, life expectancy and morbidity vary according to the education a person receives, the type of work he does and the income he receives month after month. Government agencies often develop various plans to improve the social environment (i.e. ensuring the right conditions for the full development of the subject). The objectives proposed by such initiatives include job creation, improved quality and safety in the workplace, increased access to social benefits and increased funding to help poor regions. There are several concepts that help us delve into the social environment. The concept of socialization, for example, defines the process by which people gain the necessary experience to interact with others. In other words, socialization is a process by which a person gradually adapts to the environment in which he lives. The social environment is studied from subjects such as social psychology. This branch of psychology is based on the assumption that there are psychological processes that determine the functioning of society and the way in which to communicate in society. All this shows us that the social environment is not a tough component of our lives, but since we started to be a part of it we have invariably changed it with our decisions and may even give it up to find another fit for our needs. It's easier to promote than to implement, but in many cases it's possible. If we were born or found ourselves in a toxic social environment from which we do not know how to escape, either because the system threatens us with violent retribution, or because it has instilled in us its principles since childhood, our chances of saving ourselves are much lower than those who simply make a mistake in choosing where and how to live, but can turn the page as soon as it proposes. Social work is the seed of many great achievements on a cultural, artistic and scientific level: sharing diverse experiences with our friends, traveling to other parts of the world, participating in community events and teamwork can open the door to personal and professional growth. Of course, first of all we need a proper social group, otherwise we will get opposite results. One of the key points of the concept of the social environment are values, which are understood as a series of unwavering rules that we respect as landmarks or limits in life. As a rule, values are shared in a group of friends, and that is why it is so important to surround yourself with people who can influence in a positive way. Of course, the social environment also consists and changes by us, so we must in turn polish all those issues that do not satisfy us. If we are going to get good examples, we should start by providing them and so on. The main problem arises in children and adolescents who fall into the wrong environment because they are in the middle of their personality formation and they do not yet have the tools to give up anything that harms them. Let us remember that society is understood as all people who share the same culture and who interact with each other to form a community. In this sense, social can give a sense of belonging, because it implies something that is shared at the Community level. For example, the concept of social coexistence refers to the way members of society live together. We would also face social pressures that we can say that the strong influence that society has on each member that makes it up. A social adjective can be used to form different concepts. A social worker is a graduate who is responsible for preventing or addressing social difficulties through various offices, consultations, reports and financial assistance. There is also an amount known as social spending, that is, the amount of money that is from the government of a country or city devoted to the ability to cover and meet the basic and primary needs that all its citizens have. In the same way, so-called social security can be said, which is to some extent largely related to the above concept. In particular, it is a term that we use to define an organization that exists in a state and which has as its clear purpose to meet the health needs and the economy that its population has. And that is when the concept of the beneficiary of social security emerges, which is defined as the person who is entitled to some benefit from those provided by that social security. Social classes are made up of people who have similar customs, economic means, and interests: Our relationship is impossible: we belong to two different social classes. Social sciences are the ones responsible for studying different aspects of human life and history: Anthropology is social science. Social work is an organization that has charitable or non-profit goals: I have to ask to change social work to see a doctor. Finally, we can point out that a social cause is the name by which the company is known collectively, anonymously or in business. This is the official name, not the brand the public knows: Gamesoft is a trademark of The Wonderful Actiland S.A. Other terms, which are partly made up of the word we are now analyzing, are also used in business. So, in addition to the above, there is a so famous social capital. It is a term that defines the entire set of goods, material type and money that the partners of the company contribute to it so that it can function properly. Social is something that has a direct impact on society as a whole. There is no doubt that the social fabric is very complex because it consists of people moving away from each other. A person is a person who needs moments of intimacy, but there is also a social being that applies to others at the academic level, in the professional sphere, at the level of leisure, in the family... Happiness of people at the individual level also improves society. Similarly, one of the main social problems is also a cause for concern at the individual level. For example, a country suffering from a serious economic crisis, where unemployment is a serious social problem, stands in solidarity with people who at some level put a grain of sand on the support of the most disadvantaged. Everyone at the individual level has rights and responsibilities. At the social level, the rights of the most vulnerable must be protected. There are fundamental pillars of a developed society, such as education and health care. Thus, the social plane and the individual sphere interact constantly, because each person lives in a certain social context, and the environment also has an impact on the personal level. From this point of view, given that virtuous citizens create a happy society, it is important that every person as a purpose of life thinks what he can do to build a better society and contribute a grain of sand to the common good: 1. First, it is important to remember that true happiness arises from the realization of good as a value that is an end in itself. 2. On the other hand, each person can educate their character to practice their social skills. For example, empathy makes people's coexistence more enjoyable. Similarly, a smile is also a gesture that conveys high hopes to both the recipient and the recipient. 3. Positive thinking affects the feeling and, in turn, manifests itself in action. Therefore, to have positive actions, it is also very important to generate optimistic thoughts. 4. Everyone give your best, leaving your personal essence in your actions. Showing interest in others is a positive thing.
