He's a sworn enemy of Courage. Katz's appearance is a red cat with thin limbs and a long body. He has yellow eyes with small pupils and purple glare on the lower lids, as well as purple ears, a purple nose and three purple stripes on his back. Although he doesn't seem to have eyebrows, sometimes he does such as in his debut. He is a master of disguise and even dresses up to fit the scam he is planning. Katz's personality is a smooth, unsparing and sadistic feline with a calm British accent and comes complete with his own sinister background music theme. Like most cats, he has a strong aversion to dogs, but he reserves a particular hatred of courage. Since his debut, Katz's top priority has always been to help or advance his situation in some way. He is competitive, as shown in Katz Kandy, where he tries to get Muriel to tell him her secret ingredient for her sweet recipes after coming in second to her in the Nowhere Sweet Stuff Contest for years. So crushing his competition is nothing new for Katz. Katz loves a few things, such as making confectionery treats, or managing his collection of spiders (which he calls his love). He is quite a scammer as well, specializing in scam businesses such as resort, confectionery shop, motel, and underwater cruise line. It is shown that he often kills his clients: for example, he fed his spiders by the inhabitants of the Katz Motel. Two of his common goals, of course, are Eustace and Muriel (who never seem to remember him from previous cons). Even if Muriel and Eustaphy are deceived by any service he renders, Courage never falls in love with his scheme. Because of this, all his businesses enforce a strict No Dogs Allowed policy, which forces Courage to infiltrate to save two of its owners. Despite his sinister nature, Katz has always enjoyed a bit of a defeat sport with the courage he has quite apt. It is common in some of these games that Katz will egg his opponent on in the losing. For example, during a contest said looked, he kept talking blinking when he saw Eyes of Courage watering. After all, Katz can be classified as a pure psychopath by being sadistic and deceptive, and having absolutely no relation to the life of life Other. Story Night at the Katz Motel In his first appearance, he runs the Katz Motel. Eustaphy and Muriel get a room for the night. Because of the Dogs Are Not Allowed policy, Courage is forced to be outside on the porch. It turns out that Katz runs the hotel to supply food for his collection of large human-eating spiders. He sends one to get rid of Courage, while he captures Eustace and sneaks another spider into Muriel's bathtub. After escaping the spider sent after him, Courage makes its way inside to save the old couple from eating spiders. Katz thwarts his attempts and challenges him to a dynamic game of racket. While Courage becomes exhausted, Katz plays almost effortlessly (even reading a book about spiders and enjoying a cup of tea). Although Courage loses and held Katz, ready to kill him, he is knocked unconscious by Muriel with a racket. Klub Katz In his second appearance, Katz runs the exclusive Klub Katz on the island where Eustace, Muriel, and courage washed ashore after a luxury cruise goes awry. The scheme this time is a club where occupiers get turned into a semi-machine version of themselves to fight to death in the colosseum for Katz's entertainment. He takes Muriel and Eustathia to the spa, which of course has no dogs allowed. When Courage sees Katz go out with their owners, Muriel and Eustace have been transformed into a washing machine and wrecking the ball, respectively, matching their personality-Eustace is always grumpy and destructive, while Muriel does a lot of work. Katz pits them both against each other in an abandoned colosseum where he works a cheering machine as he looks from eustaphy's chair (which he rescued from a shipwreck). Courage goes to the spa to turn himself into a helicopter and rescues Muriel (using a magnet) from the colosseum. Eustace, noticing Katz has his chair, takes a jab at the feline, only to destroy his chair when Katz dodges. He continues to chase Katz, trying to hit him, while Katz tries to reason with him. Katz Kandy Katz next appears in Katz Kandy. It is in this episode that Katz is shown to be his own candy store, Katz Kandy. The 43rd Annual Nowhere Sweet Stuff Contest is coming up and he has won second place every year to Muriel, a fact that saddens and upsets him. He hastily jam monster kidnap Muriel so he can get her to tell him her secret ingredient. Courage comes along for the ride, of course, with Eustace not far behind after (and eating) the jam trail left by the monster. Being in Katz's lair, Muriel refuses to willingly give him the secret of his recipes. He puts it on lollipops over the taffy pulling machine and ties Courage with other taffy. Katz threatens Muriel to tell him his secret or he will pull the lever that will lower her into the car, which will pull her into the taffy and her apart. Fortunately, Courage manages to eat his way out of his binds and fight Katz while still in the candy store, Eustace beats the monster jam. Katz gets the edge in their bought, though, and challenges Courage in the title role of the match when it becomes too easy for him to win. Courage holds even with Katz throwing it at a blink until Eustace enters the lair, effectively striking enough courage to make him blink. Katz throws Courage into another machine that makes Courage into a candy cube. Katz returns to candy lynx, where now both Eustace and Muriel and struggling Eustace while hanging on candy lynx trying to use their feet to pull Eustace down in a taffy machine (and vice versa). Courage rolls to the lever and candy cane Katz on goes down in the car and Katz is pulled among the green taffy, still asking for the secret ingredient. Before they leave, Muriel tells him that if he needs to know, it's vinegar. Katz cheers that it's vinegar. He does it in the Sweet Stuff contest, but he loses 1st place to Muriel once again, and this time, he has his own record because he is shown as a green piece of taffy form akin to a Wiener hot dog. Katz under water It seems Katz has found a way to get himself back to normal by the time he saw Katz underwater. In this scam, he is the captain of the SUB Standard Submarine Cruise, a vacation submarine for those who feel overworked. Muriel, who is overworked by Eustaphy, takes there Courage in need of a break. After appointing Muriel as his first tea mate, Katz says: No dogs are allowed and throws courage aside (Courage, of course, fits in the luggage of another passenger). Courage masquerades as a ventriloquist doll that deceives Katz enough time for Courage to find out that Katz plans to blow up the submarine as soon as they reach the bottom of the sea. Katz errors Muriel's complaints about the smell of explosive Tea-N-Chai to confirm that she had a spy sent out to thwart his plans to blow up the submarine. He reveals that he plans to sail to a safe place while he destroys CRUISE SUB Standards Inc., so his own Cruise on the submarine Katz will get an all-submarine vacation business. So, once again, he's crushing his competition. Unable to find help, Courage tries to stop Katz, who is about to make his escape, himself. Katz realizes that he is a dog, and during their fall, Courage breaks the lever that sets the course of the submarine on a collision course with the sea, to Katz's delight. Katz escapes into the ocean, but then turns out to be a swallowed shark. While Courage manages to save everyone, Katz remains in the shark's belly, demanding not to be eaten. Ball of revenge Katz apparently managed to get out of the shark no worse for wear as last appears in the Ball of Vengeance, along with all the other villains whose plans were thwarted by Courage. Called to the basement of the farm for a secret meeting eustaphy (who is jealous of Courage), he and other villains make a plan with Eustace to get rid of Courage and revenge forever. As soon as they capture Muriel, she resists the cry (which is the bait to get the Courage to come to her rescue). Katz starts her own brand of torture for her, by mixing whites and flowers in the washing machine and adding a ton of bleach as well. It effectively makes her scream, and Courage does race down where he jumped on the villains. Katz offers a bit of sport before he slowly dies, which Courage is forced to take. Game: Dodge ball. It's the villains against Courage, with Muriel and Eustace as spectators and Le Kwak as referee in the latest Showdown Of Courage with his enemies. Katz throws the ball with spikes at Courage, who evades injury from it. Katz is then shocked and disgusted by the unrefined weremole who eats his dodge ball. During the game, Katz helps his teammates and pulls out a flamethrower when Courage is on his last legs and is about to lose. Muriel encourages Courage, which must be something that he is good at, that makes him think. Then, sucking a lot of air, Courage does what Katz and all his enemies have helped him perfect the entire series: his traditional cry. Courage screams so loud that the earth shakes, and Katz, along with all his teammates, fall into a hole created by the chasm shaking the ground that the cry did. It is not known what will happen to him later, but he is presumed dead. Profiles in Courage Katz makes a cameo appearance during profiles in Courage as a paper model made by Silhouette Maker. Trivia Katz is one of seven characters (other Courage, Eustace, Muriel, Shirley, Dr. Vindalu, and Computer) to appear in each season. Katz has a different theme song that is usually played in the background when he's around. The theme reveals a resemblance to the guantanemer theme from the film Antz. It resembles Fergurina from John R. Dilworth's Deardy Birdie. According to John R. Dilworth, Katz's voice is the impersonation of John Hillerman of Magnum, P.I. Except for Space Chicken (which appeared in the pilot episode), Katz is the first antagonist to appear on the show. According to Paul Scheffleur, James Mason influenced his influence on Katz. Katz, the queen of the Black Puddle and Fusilli are the most evil villains in the Courage of the Cowardly Dog series. He is the first Cartoon Network villain to be pure evil. The quotes I wish you hadn't done that. Sorry, dogs aren't allowed in. A little sport before you die, dear boy? Now you'll find out why no one ever checks out a Katz motel. My love, dinner has arrived. Sad, isn't it? I'm Captain Katz, and I'm in command of you don't have me! There's no run, and have nothing to hide. Hmmm ... how lovely ...
