11W ). Intouch was a software company that created and sold software on personal computers. The company was best known for creating the WonderWare and WordPerfect word processing software. Intouch was also the primary developer of the WordPerfect word processor, which was one of the most popular word processors of the late 1990s and early 2000s. The company was founded in 1993 by John Macarthur and Jared Yang as MacVang Enterprises, an independent software developer and publisher of multimedia applications, video games, and media. The company's first product was called QuickCode, a time-saver, better known as Intouch QuickCode. A later version of the program called Intouch is best known for its word processor, which was widely distributed and highly popular during the late 1990s and early 2000s. This popularity declined in the early 2000s, as users switched to other alternatives. WonderWare was a group of DOS-based programs that were developed in the mid-1980s to early 1990s by an unknown developer. The group of programs included Word for DOS, WordPerfect for DOS, Database Manager, and other products. The group was later sold to Intouch, which in 1993 released Word for DOS. The programs were released on the Microsoft DOS platform on April 24, 1993, with the WonderWare 1.0 version. WonderWare 1.0 had an initial success, but it had a few problems. The program could not display graphics properly, as it did not support the Windows GDI. Thus, the program was not able to support a GUI, which made the program very outdated. The software development continued, and in 1994 the software developer released WordPerfect for DOS, which was the first version of the WordPerfect word processor. WordPerfect was licensed by Intouch at the end of 1995. WordPerfect 3.0 was released by the company on February 13, 1995. WordPerfect 3.0 had a dual DOS and Windows version that was released on April 8, 1995. The company released a Windows version on July 6, 1995. This version was not well received by the users, as it was buggy, and was also missing many features that were in the DOS version. On March 2, 1997, Intouch released the WordPerfect word processor for Windows 3.0. This version had compatibility issues with earlier Windows versions. For example, the program crashed when a user tries to open a file that uses Extended File Attributes in Windows 95. Also, the program crashed 520fdb1ae7
