If you are struggling with the cost of medical care, wouldn't it be nice to finally get a break by finding an affordable insurance seller? Be careful if you get a call looking just that and say it's coverage from a eminent insurer like Blue Cross and Blue Shield... This could be a scam! Read more: Watch out for these Blue Cross Blue Shield scams The Attorney General of Nebraska has issued a warning about an outfit called Simple Health, which offers health insurance allegedly through the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Nebraska at below-market prices. The alleged scammers, believed to be based in Florida, are running phones calling Nebraska residents and promising cheap health policies. When they get you on the line, they convince you that you are going to get deeply discounted rates. They then get your personal information and set up monthly repetitive transactions on your credit card. The only problem is those who have already been accepted in this scam say they never get proof of coverage or insurance cards. So you're not paying for anything! To make matters worse, scammers are reported to do their best to prevent you from cancelling and stopping monthly payments. As a note, if you ever deal with a legitimate company that continues to bill without permission after you have cancelled their service or product, try sending them this form of letter. The wording in the letter-form refers to Regulation E- part of the Federal Reserve's rules governing pre-authorized transfers. If this is a legitimate business you are dealing with, they should stop when they are told they are in compliance with federal law. But back to the scammers... According to the Nebraska attorney general, criminal players behind Simple Health have prepared to develop a ploy with falsified Google and Manta lists that visibly display the BCBS logo and web address. They even use fake physical addresses in Omaha to make unsuspecting consumers believe they are legitimate. While this particular scam call seems to be confined to Nebraska at this time, it is not inconceivable that it could cross state borders in other parts of the country in the near future. So be on the lookout! If you've ever been contacted by someone who purports to represent an organization that doesn't seem legitimate, hang up and visit the organization's official website by typing the address directly into your URL bar. Then follow the tips to contact the company. So you can make sure you contact a real company! Although not muscular, he has these blue eyes; and then there's that Scottish accent, more Of Sean Connery than with a hint of Craig Ferguson to let you know he has a sense of humor. Indeed, McEvoy, 34, seems to be enjoying himself. Around the time his breakthrough film, 2006's The Last King of Scotland, established him as a formidable presence, he also scored behind the scenes, marrying British actress Anne-Marie Duff. Now living in London with their son, the couple remain fiercely protective of their personal lives, but McAvoy is considerably freer on screen as a bully detective in Welcome to Kick (now) or showing off his naked (not to mention some serious gravitas) in Trance this spring, a thriller about a stolen painting and amnesia, who knows where it was hidden... if he could only remember. The Great Scotsman! YOU considered joining the priesthood when you were young. Are you ready to take a vow of celibacy? James McAvoy: Yes, I thought I'd give it a buzz. I wanted to be a missionary and work abroad, but the girls became a big part of my life when I lost interest in the priesthood. ELLE: Have you always been good with women? DM: The girls weren't really interested in me until I was about 14 years old. But I knew how to talk to them very quickly. What I realized was that my friends weren't-you have to talk to women like you're not constantly trying to have sex with them. It seemed to work. ELLE: You ride motorcycles. Did it start as a way to impress women? DM: No. You should have seen my bike. Google 2001 is a blue Honda Hornet 600 and you will see how uncool I look at my bike. You're famous for your blue eyes. Was there ever a time when they got you out of trouble? DM: Well, I'm an actor. And I can cry on a drop of my hat. ELLE: Did you fake crying to get out of the argument? Give me the story. DM: I can't. This will make some people feel bad. ELLE: Did a woman ever make you actually cry? DM: Yes, completely. Tons. Because we broke up, or because they cheated on me. I cried a lot because of women. I cry a lot as a human being. ELLE: Who would cheat on you? DM: Everyone was cheated, didn't they? ELLE: Did you learn anything from infidelity? JM: Just don't try to flog a dead horse. ELLE: It's a very developed mindset. What was your early relationship like? DM: I learned something from a series of failed relationships. You don't see the pattern quickly. You see it over time. I learned to jump in at the first sign of attraction. ELLE: Does that mean you get too serious too fast? DM: No, no. Once you attract someone, you go for it -- whether it's or not, it's a good idea. Basically, just go out and. But I finally met a man I'm in love with and want to spend the rest of my life with. How did you know that was right? DM: You never know it's the right thing to do. I don't think there's a proper one. There are many which you could fall in love with Marriage is a constant matter, man. You keep working on it. But it's joyful. And joyful. I don't care if people live without a marriage certificate. It's just about people, in a way, by talking to each other, I pledge you. I'll help you in this life. We're not in this room for the next 20 years by accident. We're here because we mean it. ELLE: What's the most romantic thing you've ever done? DM: I don't know. I've done a lot of stupid shit. I think the most romantic thing you can do is just show up. Show up when it's hard for you. Travel halfway around the world or just up the road. Whatever it is, just be there. ELLE: You have a pretty explicit sex scene in a trance with Rosario Dawson. Did you discuss this with your wife first? DM: No. Anne-Marie and I are both actors. We never tell each other when we have to do something weird. We keep it to ourselves. Then we'll say to each other: I had to make some kisses today. Well done. It's just embarrassing and embarrassing. ELLE: Actors always say that love scenes are clumsy. But when Rosario enters the room, naked-JM: It's so embarrassing! You sit there and say, OK. Don't look. Don't move your mouth. When they say action, you play truthfully. Before that, you don't want anyone to feel like they are being ogled, so I'm just sitting there on the bed with all this. Hope people respect me as well! ELLE: For years, people have been asking you what it was like to kiss Angelina Jolie in Wanted. JM: (Laughs) Ask her what it's like to kiss me, bastard! That was my answer quite a lot. I remember the film crew getting very excited and excited on my behalf. Guys, it's just a kiss on the screen. Calm down. They were all in love with her. But it was just another day at the office. ELLE: Good office. Do you see yourself as a sex symbol? DM: No, not at all. Actually, I play a guy where it's a bit like: yes, he's not unattractive, but it's not his looks that makes the lead girl want to be with him so much. That's how I always feel in my head. I feel like I'm being sidelined more than what I've been given. Like this story? Get it first when you subscribe to ELLE magazine.
