12' Releases: Features: (Plays with up to 4 players for up to 8 rounds in 1 player mode) Shoot the target or move and aim using an arrow-controlled cursor (use the mouse) Game rules Every round has a timer that counts up from zero. After the timer expires, the round ends and the player with the most bullets, as well as the one who hasn't shot yet, go to the next round. There are no other rules than those stated above. Game modes One-player game: Pressing the "Start" key starts the timer and the round, it will end when the round timer expires. While the other players are waiting for the round timer to expire, the game will not be played yet. You are a chicken and the other players are opponents. You have 3 lives that you will use when you are attacked by the opponents. The game is played in turns. Each player takes his turn. If you are attacked by an opponent, you lose a life, depending on the number of bullets shot. You can move in any direction. You can shoot when you are in front of the targeted player. If you are able to successfully shoot, the opponent loses a life. Note that the other opponent has to be alive for the round to end. If you're left without any bullets, the round ends. Two-player game: To start, both players must be present. One player plays as the chicken and the other one as the shooter. The timer is not started until the first player is started. If one of the players is shot while the other one is not, then the shooting player becomes the chicken. If the chicken is shot, it loses a life and the player becomes the shooter, until the player is shot and goes to the next round. There is no mode to win for shooting, the chicken just loses a life. The other player can move only in the direction of the chicken, but cannot shoot. The player who shoots is the winner. The round is not over if you shoot, but you lose a life. When playing a multi-player game, each player uses the mouse to aim the cursor, and the mouse is released when the player shoots. If the shooter and the chicken are at the same time close to each other, when the shooter releases the mouse button, the first player wins a life. Note that the chicken wins if
