Shadowhunters season 3 episode 8 coming up carries with it the title Heart of Darkness, and what you will see during his further efforts to try to turn back. The good news for some of our heroes is just like this: Jace is currently in custody. With that in mind, Shadowhunters can all breathe a collective sigh of relief that they don't exactly have to worry about taking people anymore. However, one of the problems that comes with it is just like this: He is also not separated from the evil within him, either. He's still an owl and there's a lot of work to be done. To go along with that, Lilith is still there, and Clary isn't quite in a great place. What we're trying to say is just like this: While we've seen a few characters take a few steps forward now, some are still frozen in place or in big trouble. There are only three more episodes coming this spring, and by the end of these, we hope there will be a chance to get at least some resolution – but not too many, given that there is another batch of ten episodes on the other side. Below, the Shadowhunters season 3 episode 8 resume gives you a pretty good feeling once what comes next: Magnus, Alec and Isabelle trying to reach Jace inside the owl, but even as powerful as Magnus, can he help Lightwood get their brother out of his demon prison? Maya and Jordan join Simon on the hunt for Lilith, while Luke tries to find a way to get to Clary. (Guest starring Anna Hopkins, Chai Hansen, Alexandra Orodolis and Nicola Correia-Damud) Expect this episode to be scary, but also expect a good bit of moving forward as we get closer to a big showdown with Lilith. The Shadowhunters have never had a show to slow down momentum as we are near the end of the season/half season and we have a hard time thinking they will do it here. Lilith returned her sova to the Shadowhunters, and she left a bloody trail behind her. But first, let's find out where we left off last week. Simon is both troubled and confused; he had hurt people, but had never turned anyone into salt before. It's a pretty big deal though. According to Lilith, Simon can destroy everything. So the fact that he's still in the building is something pretty important. Ollie, who appears to have become Lilith's right-hand man overnight, votes to keep her queen, and soon to be a prince safe, encouraging Lilith to leave before Luke and Simon find her. Lilith intends to do just that, but not at the front door. Using her magic, she transported herself, and Jonathan's tomb, in Roof. When Luke and Simon were left baffled in the church, Lilith went to visit the place where all my troubles began. It's not Lake Lynn or Edom, it's the kingdom of Seeley. Lilith knows exactly what sign Simon bears and where he got it. After the murder of the queen (RIP Meliorn?), Lilith demands to see the band queen Simon Mark Cain.It for the first time the sign has been named, and this is apparently the only thing that can drive Lilith back to Ed. No pressure, Simon. When the queen refuses, Lilith is ready to strike again, until the queen mentions Owl.This is all along, Lilith knew that the Owl was missing, but did not know why and where he was. But we do, like the queen of Seelie. SHADOWHUNTERS - Heart of Darkness - Magnus, Alec and Isabelle are trying to reach Jace inside the owl, but even as powerful as Magnus, can he help Lightwood get their brother out of his demon prison? Maya and Jordan join Simon on the hunt for Lilith, while Luke tries to find a way to get to Clary. This episode of Shadowhunters airs Tuesday, May 8 (8:00 and 9:01 p.m. EDT) on Freeform. (FREEFORM/John Medland) ISAIA MUSTAFA, EMERUDE TUBIA, ALBERTO ROSENDE, DOMINIC SHERWOODC safely imprisoned in the apartment of Magnus, Alec and Izzy ready to try everything to save him. This includes entering Jace's mind. According to Magnus, he is trapped there and needs to be taken out. For this to happen, they must turn to him using the strongest bond in his life: his parabatai. The only problem is that it's possible that Lilith could possess Alec while he's there, too. Of course, it doesn't matter to Alec or Izzy; they want their brother back. While the owl mocks the idea and mocks Jace's siblings, using the strange, almost voice of Batman, the team goes over their quests. Magnus climbs Izzy and Alec into Jace's head, Luke gets information about what's going on with Clary, and Simon will track down Lilith. It's done, break! Getting information from Clave is hard to start with. Being a Downworlder makes it even harder. So Luke calls in favor, from none other than Maryse Lightwood.I'm far from shipping it, despite Luke basically quoting Star Wars - Please, Maris, you're my only hope - and as writers seem to be hinting at it. But if it helps the Clary case, I'll handle it. But even Maryse points out that asking is de-runed, a former member of the circle to pull the strings with Clave a bit farfetched. However, she knows someone: her ex-husband's mistress. She is all very soapy, but she is a decent person and can help them get information about Clary.Luke is not the only one getting help in this mission. Despite all her best protests, Maya will not let Simon leave her on this. After all, he takes on the queen of hell; Any all support must be accepted. This includes helping Jordan too. Between them is still tense, but Clary needs help, and Simon needs protection. Maya can put aside her anger for it. Alisha Wainwright has been a sneaky standout this season and I'm here for that. Besides, she's not wrong, Clary may need some serious help. As a prisoner of Klava, she was on trial, with the help of the Sword of the Soul. She may have destroyed her downworlder murder force, but she can still force the truth. And that's exactly what he's doing, for the most part. When asked about Jace's actions and why she was defending him, Clary reveals to Clava that he was obsessed. Their next question is: how? Once again, we received a common response: The Jays were vulnerable after being returned by Raziel. This part of Clary shows of her own volition though. After being asked why the angel returned Jace, Clary was blunt. She asked for a wish, and she would do it again. Clave can defend it as a backup plan for beating an irresistible evil, but any desire that has the power to destroy all Downworlders should not be an option in the first place. It's an inspiring performance, but the best of the night goes to Dominic Sherwood.Owl was able to block his mind from Jace's friends once, but on the second attempt, they ind. Inside Jace's mind is the Institute, the only house he's ever known. On arrival they face younger versions of themselves training with the young Jace. When a pint-sized light wood disappears, Jace runs away scared, thinking it Lilith does. In true fashion nightmare, Alec and Izzy are separated, left to find Jace unaided. Luckily they do - twice. Izzy manages to find a young Jace at the piano and, using the lullaby Maris, which she sang, convinces him to trust her. Hearing Emeraude Tubia sing was unexpected, but certainly not undesirable. Together they head to Jace's room, where Alec is with the modern Jace. Unfortunately, Alec's meeting with Jace is much less touching. He traced the trail to Jace's room, where he found Clary dead against the wall. It wasn't just one of Clary's though. It was a few Clarys, all dead and scattered around the room. Jace, who just killed another Clary, sobs over her on the bed. He is completely broken and terrified of what he has done. Although his siblings convince him neither of them is real, Jace still does not want to return with them. He knows that Lilith will make him do much worse, and he can't accept it. He begs Alec and Izzy to kill him (he can't do it himself, he tried) and save everyone from himself. It's one of Sherwood's most vulnerable, heartbreaking scenes all season, and only hits the right cord. It's not enough to convince Alec and Izzy him though. To really drive the stake through our hearts, Izzy reminds them both: Three come in, three come out. All three come out, but it's not a happy landing. As they emerge from the spell, Lilith arrives, thanks to her tip from the queen Of Seelie. She's not too glad Magnus interfered with her work, choking him to show it. He said he'd fix it even if it killed him. Fortunately, Lilith doesn't kill him because he doesn't want to start a war with Magnus's father. But if Asmodeus is the Prince of Hell and Lilith is the queen, isn't that connected? That's the question for another day. At this point, Lilith has taken the Jays again, and Alec is overwhelmed with guilt. Magnus reminds him that they did everything they could, but it doesn't matter. Alec promised his parabata that he would not let Lilith take him again. There may be hope yet, though. Simon is still Mark Cain and he is still working to track Lilith down with Jordan and Maya. Thanks to them, they now have a general idea of her plan. When they returned to their church, they found her altar in three. They all smell of blood, but quickly realize that it's not just one person. They also find that the upper part of the altar is disconnected. Underneath it are several markings that Jordan translates, showing that it is a demonic resurrection. The only question remains, who would Lilith want to resurrect? With that, Simon goes to call Luke about everything they've learned. What he's getting back to is less than perfect. Simon enters Jordan and Maya with a heated discussion about whether Jordan has really changed. So heated that Maya herself is literally starting to change. Simon steps in before her turn is completed, but she is visibly appalled. By the end of the night she heads out of town, and Simon lets her go. It's probably better at the moment, as he'll be dealing with a lot next week. His best friend has just been sentenced to death Clave.It it's hard to believe we're already at the summer finale, but that's what we face next week. The heart of darkness is definitely a suitable build-up, and the two-hour finale looks pretty ride away. The Shadowhunters finale airs on Tuesday, May 15, at 20:00 est on Freeform.
