More on the partnerships posted on 12/19/2018 by Sarah D. Young Reporter and Editor Photo via TwitterHoliday returns usually spike after Christmas, but UPS says this year will be different. UPS says the busiest day coming back this holiday season will be Wednesday, December 19, not January 3, as in previous years. The carrier says it expects about 1.5 million packages to be repaid on 19 December, compared with 1.3 million in 2014. UPS chalks up an increase in the number of users purchased online. Consumers who started shopping online days before Black Friday are expected to start returning more than 1 million packages each day in December. The increase in returns before ChristmasTo stop the season was pushed earlier this year due to the delivery of retailers' shares, express deliveries and returns, simplified return processes and advanced re-storage and management systems, according to UPS UPS, understands the essential and evolving role that package returns play in electronic trading. As a result, UPS has helped our customers advance to reach the curve with a portfolio of technology-based return services, said Kevin Warren, Chief Marketing Officer at UPS. We help retailers provide the highest quality experience that manages the costs of the return process while meeting the needs of today's more discerning consumer. UPS says that the ability to buy online changes the retail sector. Earlier this year, Walmart rolled out changes to its online marketplace to make it easier for customers to return purchases, and Amazon teamed up with Kohl's to allow customers to return items to kiosks in certain Kohl stores. national return date, early January, and returns are still expected to spike on January 3. However, UPS says that the day will lag on December 19 in terms of consumer returns volume. Creating a compelling big company event is harder than ever. When unlimited entertainment choices are just an app click away and smart selfies can ignite an instant meme on social media, isn't it surprising that FOMO's fear of missing out is increasingly driving our behavior? With so many external stimuli competing for our time and focus, an unfortunate beleaguered conference planner who seeks to break through all the noise. But Storey Pryor, senior director of events at Isagenix, a direct sales health and nutrition company, FOMO is in a strategy to take over as it plans its annual Global Celebration event. Last year's affair brought together 15,000 people for a custom affair at the Venice Resort in Las Vegas in August. Another 20,000 Isagenix customers entrepreneurs participated via a live video channel. And while Pryor wants those people to experience the process vicariously, she also wants them to see the fun they lack. When someone releases our show on Facebook Live, she says, we love creating that fear of missing out on people who aren't in the room. The Venetian team worked with Pryor to create experiences that facilitate meaningful connections and long-term relationships. This was especially important, such as global celebration, which ballooned out of the 2,500 who attended the event at one of the first events of 2010. Since then, the company's annual sales have catapulted from $200 million to nearly $1 billion, and participation in the event has increased accordingly. The challenge now gives each participant the same sense of community and personal commitment as at the time of first getting together at a small feat for a huge event. The higher we get, the [bigger] challenge of creating touch-points that engage every participant, Pryor says. You can feel small when you're in a room with 15,000 people, so we need to get more creative. She and her team sought to create a space where everyone feels like they are part of the show, whether they are in the front row or the very last line. In Venice, Pryor found a partner who helps his team do just that. This includes a complete redesign of the main event venues, offering a wide range of health conscious fare, and providing special support from the domestic technology team in Venice has been fully equipped to make every participant feel like the star of the show. Party allfor Isagenix, Las Vegas was not the most obvious choice in the case of this size. We're a health and nutrition company, and we want to make sure we're in a very healthy and family-friendly environment, Pryor says. However, the Venetian and large-scale variety event spaces aligned with the company's values, so Pryor and her team can focus on creating an event. Venetian Resort boasts a gold LEED certificate, showing commitment to sustainable development and offers a wide range of health conscious catering establishments. People get pretty mad if the whole burger and fries are, Pryor says, referring to the problem the company faces in other places. With vegan, gluten-free, organic and locally sourced dishes offered in Venice, fitness-oriented Isagenix participants were able to dine well without fault. And like isagenix company, it is important that everyone feels welcome and safe at the event, no matter the size. It's our job to make sure we create this loving, warm environment where they feel happy to share something that is bigger than them, Pryor says. We could see how we could change the room and we just enjoyed the setting. The location of Venice, their ability to accommodate children, and the professional in-house team removed the challenges of being stretched across places throughout the city, basically, the place becomes a small city to themselves. Big... However, SmallThe's vast event space in Venice has helped to set the atmosphere of the multiday event, especially for a company where many employees work remotely or with small teams. When we have our events, we need to make sure that [the participants] feel like they're at home, Pryor says. Each detail is created by the Isagenix community, from customized letters and key cards to personalized room decorations. The unified event space in Venice, one of the largest hotels in the world, provides a backdrop for this harmonious experience. The Venice Bill, in addition to enough hotel rooms for all our participants, also hosts 12 receptions for the global festival, all of which were near the event center, says Pryor. We walked literally 50 steps to move from a general session to the store. This allows Isagenix to perform festive spirits from events and product demonstrations to food and networking events. We want everyone to feel close and connected, Pryor says, highlighting the myriad variations of Venice in both events and downtime. If guests stay just a 5-minute walk from the main area of the event, many of the aesthetic and geographical obstacles Pryor's team encountered elsewhere. To streamline communication and maintain people-to-people connection, Isagenix uses a program that ensures smooth registration and facilitates minute changes. As our events increase, technology takes [more] attention, Pryor says. Isagenix collaborated with The Venetian team to make the premier events an interactive concert vibe, including LED bracelets that ignited through the main and social media photo screens. It took almost two years of on-site visits and careful planning with team The Venetian, but for Pryor, finding his dream location was worth the effort. I look at the before and after photo quite often because I'm as proud as we could all unite, she says. With Venice, the company has a collaborator who recognizes the company's unique needs and adapts to them. These features , from personalized details and centralized events to reliable technological infrastructure, allow Isagenix to fully focus on what is at the center of their growth: every member of a rapidly expanding team. And global celebration, the partnership has led to an epic party tucked away in a family-friendly environment for a world-class hotel. This story was created and commissioned by Venice. Venice.
