To observe the effects of dexmedetomidine (DEX) on the expression of c-fos protein in different areas of rat forebrain in order to study the mechanism of DEX anesthesia. 30 SD rats were randomly divided into DEX (4.0 microg.kg(-1).h(-1)) and saline groups. c-fos protein in different areas of rat forebrain (the hippocampus, hypothalamus, thalamus, periaqueductal gray matter (PAG), neocortex, prefrontal cortex, etc.) at different time points (0, 15, 30, 45, 60, 75, 90, 105 min) after DEX infusion was detected by immunohistochemistry. The experimental results showed that c-fos protein was expressed in the majority of cells in different areas of the forebrain. There was no significant difference in the number of the c-fos protein-positive cells in different areas between DEX and saline groups. The expression of c-fos protein in the PAG, the hippocampus and the hypothalamus did not change significantly after DEX infusion. The number of c-fos protein-positive cells in the hippocampus and hypothalamus decreased significantly (P
