Maybe it's this for a while, since you furnished your home, you have inherited mishmash parts in a few moves, or your taste has changed over the years. So, what works for you now? It's an issue most people face at some point, says interior designer and half of the creative masterminds behind interior design firm Madcap Cottage, Jason Oliver Nixon. Like everything - food, fashion, or home, if it's good, it's good. If you like it, it's your style. But if you're even trying to determine what you like or not, it can help. If you've never known your sense of style or have a home design personality crisis, here's how Nixon suggests you can find your own unique look and own it. Before you switch things up, seriously think about how you use each space. Do you have children? Pets? Dirty husband? Your lifestyle will affect everything from color selection to fabrics to the functionality of your furniture. Next, shop your own home and consider which parts, colors or patterns in the existing layout will bring you joy. Shift them around your home and start updating by adding items that complement your joyful choices. Look for inspiration from your closet. The key to your home decor style, already in your home, you can find it in your clothes, shoes and accessories. As you sift through the clothes, do you see the pattern? Maybe you love the blues, with gray and yellow accents here and there? Think about what vibes your clothes give out-boho, preppy, playful? All these great indicators are what your personal style will both translate well to your home decor. Choose 5 of your favorite colors or prints from your wardrobe and go from there. Don't be afraid to mix the match. In 2019, the focus on the all-things-minimalist will be good... Minimum. The Maximalist is a new wave of must-try home decor, and it's perfect for testing new ideas. Love the chair from your mother-in-law's living room? Pair it with a modern sofa. Mixing all the items that you like together can work and this is the easiest way to claim your own original look. Worried about the overwhelming space? Start with your little room and work from there. Anything that on a small scale feels manageable and bold designs can destroy the architecture, making the space look bigger. The source of the pieces that tell your story. Always be on the lookout for items that pique your interest. If you are on vacation and discover the picture you love, pick it up. Uncover the big flea market to find? Put it on a new one This also applies to inherited items. Nothing tells you and the history of your home is quite like items are passed down from generation to generation. Generation. An easy way to create special memorable moments in your home? Build a gallery wall showing family photos, drawings of your children and the art you love. It gives your guests a perfect look at your life and how much you love your living space. Go big or go bold. This is your home, there are no right or wrong answers when it comes to your eye design. Find what speaks to you and work with it. Be creative with color by infusing it in unconventional ways, like through houseplants. They can literally breathe new life into the room. If you're worried about infusing bold shades or florals into your home, start small, with rule three. Choose one color and it will appear in three different locations throughout the space. (If appears orange on a varnish tray, lampshade, or even matting your work). This adds to the interest, but retains a balanced and cohesive appearance. The most important thing is to have fun! Have you found your own interior design style? Well done! Now you can meet Jason Oliver Nixon at the Philly Home and Garden Show to get tips on how to occupy your space from gray to stunning.
