(I know it is a lame serial number but the company does not provide it). Any help is appreciated. A: The only way to check if your serial number is genuine is to do a reverse engineering of the software. If it has some sort of protection layer that is preventing that, there is no other way to check if it's real. Also see this related question. Cost-effectiveness analysis of an early discharge of stroke patients who were treated with intravenous thrombolysis and mechanical thrombectomy. To estimate the cost-effectiveness of an early discharge of stroke patients who were treated with intravenous thrombolysis and mechanical thrombectomy in China. A Markov model was constructed to simulate the transition of patients from different clinical states to death or a healthy state for 5 years. One-way and multi-way sensitivity analyses were conducted. A total of 6744 patients were treated with thrombolysis, and 823 patients were also treated with mechanical thrombectomy. When the total direct medical costs were 1,290,000 ¥, the incremental cost-effectiveness ratio was 150,500 ¥ per quality-adjusted life year (QALY) gained.

The incremental cost-effectiveness ratio was 28,400 ¥ per QALY gained when the probability of a stroke patient being discharged was 0.90. When the probabilities of death and disability were 0.50 and 0.20, respectively, the incremental cost-effectiveness ratio was 13,600 ¥ per QALY gained. An early discharge of stroke patients was not cost-effective, especially when there was a high probability of disability or death. A prompt rehabilitation was recommended to stroke patients who were discharged early to improve the quality of life.
