Thanks to the hard work of the community, we were able to catch the theft and gain intel on the authors. The attack is quite severe, as the companies we have infected have numerous systems and the attack continues even after a complete reboot of the system. In the past we have seen botnets attacking multiple targets simultaneously. This has not been the case so far, but at least 20, systems have been infected. Indeed we have seen several organizations in the past trying to steal the video game assets of their rival, but this time it looks like a real attack that probably might include the theft of the game source code. Thanks to the diligence of our community we were able to provide intel about the attack to our corporate partners, including the hosts in the command and control network that were used in the attack. Below you can find some facts that were gathered during the course of the investigation. Therefore, we recommend that you follow the instructions on the site to block malware at the system level.
