jump. As the game is 2D, all fighters have their own 2D sprites and animations. The player must gain the upper hand by smashing attacks on their opponents' body parts (such as their legs or fists) and by dodging or leaping away from attacks. The player's character can change from one fighter to another in mid-round, allowing a different experience with each character. The game also features a selection screen where the player can choose the type of fight they want to participate in, the number of rounds, and characters. In single round battles, players can choose from characters from the second, third, and fourth wave.

The player can then select three of their favorite fighters. In championship matches, the player must select their favorite fighters, and a computer-controlled opponent will be used to select characters in reverse order. The computer will alternate between fighting with the player's fighters, and fighting with the fighters of the last selection screen. The type of fight and number of rounds can be changed at any time. In multiplayer matches, the player can choose between one-on-one and tag team battles.
