Relive friendship with your friends and relive the joy of wearing your best pair of jeans with Purani Jeans. Wednesday, October 14, 2012 Wife: You can't get the dress back from the shop? Him: No - we must return it after 30 days. What's the point of the dress? You'll understand when you have a daughter. Ohhh! Q: What colour should I have an eggplant tattooed on? A: White. How does my friend see me? As an eggplant. Everyone has heard the phrase "Eggplant is the vegetable for the soul." But there's a whole segment of the market still to be tapped. An eggplant farm in Guwahati is one step closer to tapping into the value of this lovable vegetable by promoting it as a powerhouse of mental strength fertility booster. The first thing that strikes you is the stench of ammonia. Everything that happens in the plant is a little on the gross side. But it is not only the smell that makes it repellant. Cacapon Valley Fruit and Vegetable Farm's eggplant production facility is set in the fields of Marble Barn Farm, owned by managing director, Anup Basu. But the facility is in a different league. It is one of a kind in the country and an example of efficiency at its best. What the farmers have realised is that eggplant is the right vegetable for the garden of the mind. They have developed and acclimatised their eggplant to the Guwahati climate. They say that over the past 10 years or so, the farm's stock has improved immensely and this is amazing considering the problems that faced the farmers when they first initiated their production. The ammonia? The ammonia is there to help the process of fermentation of the sap. The water used is a special sort, called Himalayan spring water. So the ammonia, which actually is a symptom of the vegetable having to work harder, is not only vital for the production 520fdb1ae7
