Under your spell meaning

Picture: Barry Rosenthal / Stockbyte / Getty Images In 1925, nine newspapers gathered to create the first national spelling bee of the United States. While the first winner received only $500 in gold pieces, today the competition is widely televised and the winners enjoy more than $40,000 in prizes. The number of competitors also jumped from nine to around 515 in 2018, although the Scripps National Spelling Bee experienced a short break during 1943, 1944 and 1945. While moderately simple words such as therapies, initials and meaning prevailed in the earliest years of competition, contestants today take on words more similar to gesellschaft, condottiere and soubresaut. Perhaps it is surprising to know that a primary school student can get to grips with these words, but the truth is: today the youngest contestants are only eight years old, and the oldest is 15 years old. Not only are these adolescents amazing spellers, but they also have to be calm and poised, because judges will disqualify anyone who utters a mind, hmm or ah. Fortunately, during this quiz there will be no one to send you home on national television. Unfortunately, however, there is no potential reward of $40,000. Continue, test your vocabulary anyway with the next quiz!

If you think you can hang out with the national spelling champions, take this quiz! Let's start with a misspelled word misspelled. Did you know that misspelled is often misspelled? If you hadn't, you might have been in trouble. Too many people write misspelled with only one with, as in misspelled, when the word actually has two with. Double letters can cause a lot of confusion among writers, so if you can never remember how much is with and p in Mississippi, then you're not alone! Another reason words are often misspelled is because of silent letters, as in the word pneumonia. We certainly don't say p, do we? And why on the other side is the word knight written with a k? At least you can't confuse it with a night that seems to have an extraneous g floating there. Whew!
