

Dear YouTube Partner,

As many of you may know, the custom thumbnail program has been running for some time now, allowing our partner community to select custom images for their videos. The program has received a very positive response and we are hoping to continue to allow all partners access to this feature. However, we have received feedback from the community that some partners have abused this system by choosing thumbnails that are not representative of their content. In an effort to improve user experience on the site, we wanted to reiterate that abuse of this system will lead to the temporary suspension or revocation of custom thumbnail privileges. Partners that are flagged by our community and are found to be abusing the program will be issued a warning and informed of this penalty by email. If YouTube finds you to be in violation of this policy three times your privilege will be revoked.

What do we mean by representative thumbnails?

Thumbnails must be representative of the video content. Specifically, the Community Guidelines [\[http://www.youtube.com/v/community_guidelines\]](http://www.youtube.com/v/community_guidelines) state, "Don't create misleading descriptions, tags, titles or thumbnails in order to increase views." When a user searches or browses for content on YouTube they use video thumbnails to pick which video most accurately represents the videos they wish to view. If your thumbnail aims to convince users that your video contains content they are searching for, it ought to contain it.

Sincerely,
The YouTube Team
