

TOURISM SITES

When we talk about things that visitors want to do, we call them “tourism sites.” They can be things that people do or just see. This is further explained in the 'Places & Experiences' section.

There are tourism sites all over the world. Some popular examples include:

Eiffel Tower

Statue of Liberty

Great Wall of China

People save up their money to go to these sites, and often take friends and family with them. These are HUGE sources of revenue for the countries. For instance, the Eiffel Tower has more than eight million visitors per year. Obviously this many visitors has a significant impact on the French economy. According to Statistica, in 2016 visitors spent a total of 198.3 billion euros in France and employed 2.8 billion people.

What could become Ghana's Eiffel Tower?
