Johns Hopkins Kimmel Cancer Center investigators report that they have discovered a new mechanism by which invasive breast cancer cells evade the immune system to metastasize, or spread, to other areas of the body. They propose to develop treatments aimed at this process to stop or prevent metastases and reduce mortality from breast cancer. Natural Killer (NK) July 10, 2020 No comment robinvan Messages: 1014 Joined: May 2007 Oldtimers here will remember me from a couple of years ago, during which I was dealing with a rogue liver met. At the time I started an online magazine of cancer stories, personal updates, reflections, humor, and videos. I stopped posting in October '07 when I was NED and back to work. Now that I'm back from work and in active treatment I started posting again. Recent posts have included Waiting, Repetition, Don't Be Afraid, and Cancerese I invite you to join me. Cancer Magazine Rob; in Vancouver, our soul must perform two duties. First, we must be reverently surprised and surprised. The other is that we have to gently let go and let it be. Always enjoy God.
