Educator Dr. Edward William Dolch developed the list in the 1930s-40s by studying the most common words in children's books of that time. The list contains 220 service words and 95 high frequency nouns. These words comprise 80% of the words you would find in a typical children's book and 50% of the words found in adult writing. Once a child knows this list of words, it makes reading much easier, because the child can focus their attention on the remaining words. Dolch words are commonly divided into groups by grade level, from pre-kindergarten to third grade, with a separate list of nouns. There are a total of 315 Dolch Sight Words. Of particular concern is the possibility that child could have dyslexia. Many people assume that dyslexia is a visual problem, in which the brain misinterprets what the eyes see. But research has shown that, in most cases, dyslexia is a hearing problem. In these situations our phonetic awareness curriculum can help a lot by giving these children the help they need to prepare to learn to read. So I wanted to take this opportunity to offer some advice. My 5-year-old grandson has many signs of dyslexia. He's starting kindergarten and doesn't recognize all his letters or numbers. We've worked hard with him. SightWords.com it looks like it could help. Are there images for words like mine, one, etc? - Teri Hi Teri, Our phonetic awareness curriculum is a great place to start with your grandson. I recommend that you start with the Composite Words module, and then work through syllables activities until you are firm in your understanding of concepts. Here are some other suggestions for you to follow: If your grandson's school has a speech/language pathologist (SLP), set up a meeting. If the SLP knows the Fast ForWord program, it can help your grandson. Think about the thought of using to teach your child to read in 100 easy lessons at home every day. Read Overcoming Dyslexia by Sally Shaywitz. It will give you good information and strategies. Buy a set of glass paper alphabet letters. Use your first two fingers of the dominant hand to track and repeat the letter names. Start with letters that look the same in both uppercase and lowercase form (Cc, Ss, etc.). Then have him close his eyes (or use bandaged eyes) and move his two fingers to crawl over the card and see if he can name it. If you can't, give it a choice of two, then three, then four to choose from. When firm with the name of the letters when crawling them, use the same letters without blindfolded eyes, mix them with other letters, point to one you have tracked and call them. Once you have learned similar-looking letters in uppercase and lowercase, add the different letters (Hh, Gg, etc.). There are no visuals for words like mine or one except in sign language. These are high frequency words that can be learned using our vision word teaching techniques after you have learned the names of all lowercase alphabet letters. Send to your school a written communication requesting an evaluation to determine if a learning capacity is evident. Date and keep a copy! The request probably won't be acted on for a while, but it will put you on notice that you're worried and why. This will strengthen your case if you continue to have problems that do not. If there is a tutor trained in the Orton-Gillingham methodology in your area, look into hiring that person to help your grandson. Page 3 July 10, 2016 By Margo We are proud to announce that this summer we have developed even more word games in sight to play with your Our website now has a total of 18 fully customizable vision puns to give your children the practice they need to build their vocabulary. As with all our other vision word games, all the materials you need (cards and game boards) can be downloaded and printed directly from your computer and mdash for free! Words of Vision Last Card is our take on the popular card game Uno. Like Uno, you play cards by matching the color or number. But remember to read the word of view on the card first, and be careful with the wildcards! In The Lucky Words 13 View, your child picks up cards by correctly reading the vision words printed on them. Add or subtract card numbers until you have exactly 13 points. Hangman vision words is very similar to hangman's classic game. Instead of guessing the letter-by-letter words, your child will look at the quick cards and read the vision words printed on them. But for every word you miss, you must add a piece of the body to the nose of the hangman! Words of View Donkey is simply a new name for our old maid game words of sight. Did you know what Australians call this donkey card game? Find and collect letters of words in view of game, and don't be what's left with the donkey card! Page 4 August 10, 2016 By Betsy On July 29 and 30, board members of the Georgia Early Childhood Education Association gathered at the Cobb Galleria Center outside Atlanta to attend the Southeast Homeschool Expo, a convention for home education families and resource providers across the Southeast U.S. The Georgia Early Childhood Education Association set up a table in the huge exhibition hall. We have encouraged attendees to join GPA and participate in our organization and training opportunities. Most of our stand was dedicated to our sponsorship of SightWords.com amazing resources available on the website. Convention attendees came to try the games on our phonetic awareness curriculum, as well as watch some of the activity videos on how to make the site so easy to use. A selection of vision puns were also on hand for children and adults to try. Out.
