While there are undoubtedly online video games that are not suitable for children, it is quite a few for young gamers to always provide a safe environment for a multiplayer gaming experience without the need for parental supervision. Here are some fun online video games for children of all ages to be played by themselves. Pokemon Sun and Pokemon Moon are modern introductions to long-running Pokemon role-playing games that began in the 90s on Nintendo Gameboy. In addition to offering some really fun single player offline story campaigns that will keep players of all ages busy for days, each Pokemon game supports online multiplayer in the form of pokemon trading and battles. Communication with other Pokemon players is very few, and almost entirely basic game information is limited to their nickname and how many Pokemon I've been entered into a player's in-game ID card. In this game, players take on the role of Inklings, child-like characters who can turn into colorful squid and return again, and compete in online matches with up to eight people. The goal of each match is to cover as much team-colored space as possible with blasting and spray paint on the floor, wall and opponents. In Fortnite, voice chat is enabled by default to work with other team/team members, but this is disabled in settings on all platforms of the game. Children can create private chats with their personal friends on xbox one and PlayStation 4 consoles, but this can be completely disabled using the parental restrictions of that console.
