SIEGEL was born in the Bronx, New York. While living on Jerome Avenue and attending City College (CCNY) in the 1960s, he was swept up in the social and political currents of the time. He was intrigued by the influence contemporary culture had on individual behaviour: did people shape society or did society shape people? He applied his interest in social forces and human behavior to the study of crime and justice. After graduating from the CCNY, he attended the newly opened criminal justice program at The State University of New York in Albany, where he earned both his Ph.D. and Doctorate degrees. After completing his postgraduate work, Dr. Siegel began his teaching career at Northeastern University, where he was a faculty member for nine years. After leaving the Northeast, he held teaching positions at the University of Nebraska, Omaha, and Saint Anselm College in New Hampshire, and at the School of Criminology and Justice Studies at the University of Massachusetts, Lowell, where he taught for 27 years; He is currently professor emeritus, still teaching online courses in criminology and criminal justice. Dr Siegel has written extensively in the field of crime and justice, including books on youth law, crime, criminology, criminal justice and criminal proceedings. He is a judicially certified expert in police conduct and has testified in numerous legal cases. Father-of-four and grandfather-of-three Larry Siegel now lives in Naples, Florida, with his wife, Terry, and their two dogs, Watson and Cody. JOHN L. WORRALL is a professor of Criminology at the University of Texas at Dallas. A Seattle native, he received a BA, double special in psychology and law and justice, from Central Washington University in 1994. Both his master's degree (criminal justice) and PhD (political science) were received from Washington State University, where he graduated in 1999. From 1999 to 2006, he was a member of the faculty of criminal justice at California State University, San Bernardino. He joined UTD in the fall of 2006. Dr Worrall has published articles and book chapters on topics range from legal issues in the police to the extent of crime. He is the author of Crime Control in America: What Works? (3rd ed., Pearson) and Criminal Proceedings: From first contact to appeal (5th ed., Pearson); co-author of several texts, including most recently, with Jennifer L. Moore, Criminal Law and Procedure (Pearson, and editor of Police Quarterly magazine. Goff's Criminal Justice in Canada, 8th Edition (PDF) provides students with an overview of the criminal justice system and identifies many crime control policies, and Supreme Court decisions that will have and have a significant impact on our criminal justice system. As in previous editions, the eighth edition has been revised and updated to reflect the changes and rulings that have affected Canada's criminal justice system, such as landmark rulings on physician-assisted suicide and delays in trial. In addition, the eighth edition addresses critical and current issues, including indigenous offenders and the criminal justice system, the use of solitary confinement in corrections and racial profiling by the police. With criminal justice in Canada, eighth edition, students will gain a better understanding of these and other issues affecting Canada's criminal justice system. New in this eighth edition Updated crime statistics and data New feature box questions to help generate discussion and critical thinking New chapter online: Chapter 14 Contemporary issues in the Canadian criminal justice system revamped end-of-chapter summary section to better help student review and understanding in text features to help college students better understand content.
