Q: Debugging ASP.NET applications with IIS and Tomcat I have created a ASP.NET MVC application with a Data Access Layer that works with a Postgresql database. When I run the application in VS2008 in debug mode (with a breakpoint in the Global.asax.cs file), and the machine is connected to the LAN I can get into the site fine, but when I deploy to the server running IIS 6 and Tomcat I get a "connection reset" from the database. Any ideas what is causing this to happen? EDIT: I have now implemented this method as described on the MSDN blog and I am still experiencing the problem. EDIT 2: I have now found that if I start the site in debug mode, this problem does not occur. However, if I publish to the server, and then start the site in debug mode it breaks. I can't really understand why this is happening. A: I figured out the problem. This only occurs when you deploy to a server that is running IIS 6 and Tomcat. The problem is that ASP.NET MVC does not use Application Virtual Paths. When you are debugging in VS2008 your application is setup to use a different URL than the one that you would access when you run the site directly. The way to solve this problem is to manually setup the virtual path on IIS and specify the correct application. This solution does not work when using IIS as a web server and not Tomcat. Rob has done a fantastic job.
