Einige Word-Funktionen können in Google Docs nicht angezeigt werden und werden bei Änderungen entferntDetails anzeigenLetzte Änderungen anzeigen Power on but the device will not brew. Open the top lid of the coffee machine and make sure there is enough water to make coffee before disassembly. In addition, on the front side of the pot there is a water level sensor that reflects the water in the machine. If there is not enough water, add more water and try brewing again. There is a possibility that your pan coffee maker refuses to work because the filter is concentrated or unbalanced. Open the top cover of the machine and place the filter. If the problem persists, the filter may be a blunder and need to be replaced. If this is the problem, find a new filter in the nearest home appliances store. If the machine does not turn on, it may be clogged with minerals from tap water. Fill the glass pot with 5 cups of white vinegar and hold the start button down for 2-3 minutes. When the coffee maker starts to heat up, pour the vinegar through the filter. Then rinse the machine with water and resin another pot of coffee. It is not possible that the machine is not working properly due to lack of power. Check your home's switch box and make sure the circuit is up and running. If it is switched off, reset the circuit breaker. If it is still defective, you may need to replace the power cord. Check out our guide to replacing the power cord. Or contact Mr. Coffee to replace and repair the cord. Your coffee is not warm. Make sure the coffee pot is switched on and has power access. The socket you're using may not be working. Also, be sure to make sure that the cord is fully connected to the wall and there are no malfunctions in the wiring. When not used for a long period of time, the heating console automatically turns off. You cannot disable this feature. Take out the previous pot and re-brew the new coffee or reheat the coffee separately. There may be a problem with warming plates. If everything else works and you've tried out all of the above options, warming plates may need to be replaced. See our guide to replacing the insulation plate. The basket filter overfills and you return to the mess instead of a pot of coffee. Make sure that the area where you place the filter is placed correctly at the top of the coffee machine. The lid should be closed with ease, and the tabs should fit into their proper holes. It is not possible that you put too much coffee grounds in the filter. This will cause it to clog up and not enough water to pass. Remove all grounds and try again using the specified number of grounds. A glass coffee pot may be improperly aligned with warming plates. Place the pot and make sure it centres on the warming plate, and try brewing again. There may be a build-up of hard water from filter to pot on the spout, or it is damaged. Every time you make coffee, there's coffee grounds in the decaner. Make sure that the coffee filter is in the basket correctly. Improper placement causes the coffee grounds to flow around the filter into the decaner. In some cases, the filter may collapse or deform. If this is the case, the filter will need to be replaced. Collapsed and deformed filters allow coffee grounds to pass through the decaner. Check out our filter replacement guide here. You constantly find water puddles under the coffee machine. The problem may be that you just use too much water to make coffee. Find a sensor that displays how much water you've poured and don't pour 12 cups above the mark. The high temperature of the pipes at the bottom of the machine can be free or damaged from movement or heavy use. Using strong cleaning chemicals to remove a crochel from the coffee maker can damage the heating coil. If the leakage source is not from the overflowing water, turn the machine over (while empty), remove the screws from the bottom of the machine and locate the source of the leak. See our pipe replacement guide. The insulation plate may have melted or otherwise damaged the sealing ring, a rubber ring that lines the connection between the insulation plate and the base of the machine. It is assumed that the water does not flow through the base of the coffee machine. See our O-Ring replacement guide.
