INTRO / BACKGROUND:

INSTRUCTIONS / PROCEDURE:

Swarm Source brings you through three phases.

In Phase 1 you spit your mind out on the table. All of it. Your issues, concerns, opportunities, conflicts, confusions, secret talents, and farfetched plans.

When your thought worms lay documented before you Phase 2 begins. The infobits wake up and seem to gain a life of their own. Your familiar logic clumps dissolve and swirl around, spinning out pieces here and there that grow bigger or smaller, then rejoin in a new configuration, just like a swarm.

At first you fear that the situation has gotten out of control. This turns out to be the whole point. The information is not yours anymore. But it is yours. It is simply taking on unexpected relationships within itself that were not permitted while the information was all inside your mind.

Your nonlinear field intelligence is now free to interact with the force of evolution, like primordial cells conglomerating into strange but completely natural formations. Right before your eyes, relevancies transform. What seemed to be the most important suddenly vanishes. New information takes its place. The process breathes, like a living tide. First in, then out, then in, then out again.

Quietly Phase 3 starts: the distillation. Everything unnecessary falls away. The clarification reveals a new thoughtmap for thinking in your world. It's a distinction taking shape. One (or perhaps two) change initiatives emerge, custom designed to effectively achieve the goals you originally set. It is probably something you never thought of before. The empowerment jumps off the table and lands back inside your mind, immediately sourcing spontaneous new actions. The world works differently after Swarm Source.
