The game is a continuation of Cruis'n World and is the third entry in the Cruis'n series. It was ported to the Gratuitous Games for the nintendo 64 in 2000, along with a version of Game Boy Color developed by Crawfish Interactive. The Gameplay Cruis'n Exotica has gameplay similar to previous games in the series, but adds a PIN system to track progress, as in San Francisco Rush 2049. Levels are found in exotic locations in the universe such as Las Vegas, India, and the surface of Mars. The game also allows the player to choose the driver during the races, including The Martian, Child, Clown and Cowboy. The Nintendo 64 version is very similar to its arcade version, containing hidden tracks and vehicles, but with some abbreviations (graphics have suffered a loss of detail, and no licensed vehicles). I wow I loved it in the arcade and love it on the N64 who doesn't like it don't like the wacky racing games that even my 3 year old enjoys. I have two racing wheels with built-in drone and trades and this game rocks. Love vehicles, tracks and music. The only thing on the N64 graphics isn't quite on par with the arcade, but I still love it! Az... Expand the racing game. In addition to the Nintendo 64, the game was also released for Arcade and Game Boy Color. The game has sold about 270,000 copies worldwide (source: vgchartz). Sms Filipe de Oliveira (Revs TV).
