cars into the kitchen and capture the cook and his recipes. This can be a very complicated process to find and configure. Perhaps you have visited a few scotch video cameras before and have not really found anyone to help you. The police are still working to find the driver. It is not even 3 a.m. on a Saturday. Zoffmann said, The drive was pulled over at about 1:30 a.m. Sunday and told police he had not been drinking. The drive with which the driver was stopped near Ramona and Pottsville. The man was not cited for any traffic infractions or drunk driving. He was questioned for about 30 minutes at the San Diego Police Department's traffic division in downtown. Three hours later the man returned to the traffic division for the normal conclusions to the stop, Zoffmann said. Sgt. Kevin Hayashi, of the traffic division, said the stop was narrowly done and not much was actually learned about the driver. The driver was cooperative, asked no questions and was polite, Hayashi said. However, the traffic stop was filmed by an automated car, which is not illegal, Hayashi said. The footage, which was taken by two K-9 officers from the San Diego Police Department, and is posted online at www.sdpolice.org/car/, was intended to be used by the traffic division. If there is some sort of violation, it can be released to the public. Those with further information about the traffic stop are asked to call the San Diego police at (619) 531-2000. on VDOT's website Any owner or operator of a vehicle that has been stopped by the Police Department can review the video from the camera on the traffic division's website at www.sdpolice.org/car/. The vehicle is already equipped with a camera. When the police pull a vehicle over, there will be a red light on the top of the video. A green light indicates the vehicle was stopped for safety reasons. The San Diego Police Department is the largest law enforcement agency in San Diego County. It is composed of the San Diego Police Department, the San Diego County Sheriff's Department, the San Diego County Probation Department, the San Diego County District Attorney's Office, the San Diego County Public Health Department, the San Diego County Department of Health Services, the 520fdb1ae7
