HOW SHAVE YOUR FACE - FACE SHAVING TIPS FOR THE WORLD YOUR FACE - FACE SHAVING TIPS FOR MEN It's a new day and now is the perfect time to get ready and start something great. Learn how to shave your face by reading our tips below. Whether you're shaving for the first time or you're a professional, we have some tips on how to get a smoother, more comfortable shave. It's simple - we do it almost every day, and yet there's an endless debate about how to do it right. So we took on the mental hard work on behalf of the men and came back with an eight-step guide on how to shave a face, made simple. First, hydrate to help minimize nicks, cuts and irritation while shaving. We recommend shaving immediately after a shower or even in the shower. Hydration softens the hair, allowing the razor to slide more easily. Use a facial scrub or wash to remove oil, dirt and dead skin, preparing the skin for a comfortable shave. Apply a shaving gel or foam foam it and spread it all over to help moisturize your hair, improve razor slip, and help protect against irritation. Find out more here about why you need shaving cream, and the differences between shaving gels and foam. Check the grease strips; if they look faded or worn out, or if the blades feel bored while shaving, it may be time for a new cartridge. Get every 4th order for free when you sign up with Gillette (see terms and conditions). Use light, gentle touches to allow your razor to do the job - The Gillette Fusion5 ProGlide Shield has a swivel Flexball that adapts to the contours of your face. Rinse the blades often. Remember that don't shave without shaving cream or excessively shaving the same spot, as it can cause irritation. When you press a razor on the sink can seriously damage exactly the engineered parts of the razor. So, with or against the grain? The answer to this question is both. Facial hair grows in many ways, so you'll shave both with and against the grain at different times in your routine. Shave in the direction that feels most comfortable. An advanced multi-blade razor, like the ProGlide Shield, will help you get a comfortable shave even against the grain. Use precision trimmer on the back of any Fusion5 razor to get these hard to get to places like under your nose and identify your lateral burns. Wash your face with cool water and pat it dry. Rub in moisturizing aftershave lotion such as Gillette® enrich the beard and face moisturizer made with cocoa butter and shea butter to help your skin feel soft and comfortable. Shaving with Sensitive Skin Helps Prevent Razor Burn Like a Groom's Body In: Galleries, Short Galleries, Episode Gallery Share Shave Not big value once you get the hang of it. It's fast, easy, and if you follow the tips below, absolutely painless. Razor Shaving Basics Just Using a Razor to Remove Remove hair shaft grown through the skin. Razors come in many shapes. There are standard razors that are either fully disposable or disposable blades that need to be replaced regularly, and there are electric razors. Using an electric razor can be quick and comfortable, but many guys believe that it can't give the close and accurate shave that a standard razor can. Although using an electric razor is pretty easy (just turn it on and move it around your face), shaving with a standard razor has a few rules to follow. When you use a standard razor, the most important item you need is a clean, sharp blade (the best razors have at least two blades and a moving head). Try to avoid shaving with a blunt or blunt blade. At best, a dull blade will give you an uneven shave and leave you with redness, stains, and spots of unshaven hair on your face and neck. At worst, a dull blade will remove a fair amount of your skin along with your hair! Don't be afraid to change the blade (or razor if you use a disposable look) often. You'll be glad you did it. Shaving scratches natural oils off your face, so the next most important item is a kind of shaving gel to keep your skin from getting too dry and reduce friction from the razor. Choose a gel you think sounds good and give it a try. If you choose a cop isolated shaving gel, keep in mind that menthol can sometimes cause a small reaction with some skin types and can lead to red spots. If this happens to you, don't worry. Just switch to a men-free shaving cream. Oh! Cuts and nicks are part of shaving. They won't happen to you every time, but they will happen. When you nick or cut yourself, be sure to grab a clean cloth or cloth and apply direct pressure to stop the bleeding. If you have a zit or cut right in the middle of the area you are going to shave, it's a good idea to give up the standard razor for a while and use an electric razor or give the shaving break altogether for a few days. In addition, some guys may get ingrown hair after shaving, in which the hair grows back into the skin. It can pierce the hair follicle, which in turn causes razor blows. Called folliculitis, this condition can sometimes be treated with a special safety razor, but it doesn't always work for every guy. If you are experiencing folliculitis, talk to a dermatologist about the best way to remove your beard and moustache. As you shave before you start, be sure to rinse your razor after every few strokes. Thus, the razor is cleaned of any shaving cream or hair that can clog it. Also, because the hair on different parts of the face grows in different directions, Try shaving in the direction your hair grows (shaving against the direction your hair grows can lead to razor burn, redness, and rash). Now let's shave: First, wet faces with or warm water. This makes your facial hair softer and opens the pores of your skin, getting you ready for closer and easier shave. Even better, try to shave right after you get out of the shower. Squirt some shaving gel into your arm and then apply it to the face, making sure to cover the sides of the face, chin, mouth area (around the lips), neck and throat. Tap the razor on the area you want to shave (it's a good idea to start on your face as they are easy to handle). Use short, slow strokes and be sure to move the razor in the direction your hair grows. Don't push too hard, but don't be too gentle. Find the right touch by making sure the razor is cutting your hair rather than your skin. You'll know if you're too gentle if you only remove the shaving cream and your hair is still there. When the sides of your face are finished, move on to more complex places. For areas such as the upper lip/mustache area, lower lip/chin area, and neck/throat area, you will have to work a bit. Try to stretch the skin a bit to make a flat surface, and slide the razor across these complex areas. When you're done, rinse your clean, smooth face with cold water. If you want, get a shave after you shave. Depending on how fast you grow that beard and mustache, repeat the whole process in 1 to 3 days. Review: KidsHealth Medical Experts There is no shortage of men's razors and other shaving tools on the market, but do any of them offer the perfect shave? According to dermatologists, it's less about what tools you use and more about your preparation for shaving and technique. For a clean and comfortable shave, dermatologists offer these tips. Shop Our $7 Kit Whether you're shaving for the first time or just want to better protect your skin from irritation, we've put together some tips on preparing shaving for a better experience. Step 1Moisturize your skin When your skin is well hydrated, your body hair will become thick with water and come off the skin more easily, resulting in less chance of skin irritation. Soak the area you plan to shave for about three minutes through a warm shower or bath, or under running water. Step 2Exfoliate before shaving, if you need it if you want a closer, longer shave, try peeling before you start shaving. Exfoliating helps remove any surface level, dead skin and helps your razor glide over your skin more easily. It is better to exfoliate the skin before shaving, not after. Otherwise, you may risk causing additional irritation. Use a loofah or gentle scrub in the shower for the best results. Learn more about exfoliating before shaving. Step 3 Use enough shaving gel to avoid irritation The time you moisturize your skin, apply a thick, even amount of gel to shave over the area you plan to shave. Using gel shaving properly will help prevent moisture loss and add an extra layer to avoid any nicks, cuts and hair pulls while shaving, and thus cut the itchy razor bumps and skin irritation after shaving - especially if you have more sensitive skin. Using a shaving gel also shows you exactly where you shaved with your razor already. This helps to avoid shaving over any areas, thereby reducing the chances of skin irritation. Learn more about how shaving gel can help you avoid irritation and learn how to choose shaving cream. Step 4Tove the right razor Most razor blades will last from five to 10 shaves. And, whether it's using disposable or reusable razors, you'll want to make sure your razor blade is sharp and clean. This will reduce the likelihood of feeling the blade pull on the body's hair or feel rough while sliding on the skin. If your blade starts doing this, it's time to replace it. After shaving, be sure to rinse the razor completely, let it dry air and keep it dry in the shower. Learn more about choosing the right razor for you. Step 5 Find out how to properly shave your best chance of achieving your best shave will depend on what areas of your body you shave. Learn more about how to shave: Legs: Shave lightly from ankles to armpits: Shave in all directions your hair is growing bikini area: shaving towards hair growth first; Then you can go against the grain for a closer shave When you're done shaving, rinse, pat your skin dry and apply your favorite moisturizer. After shaving, hydration will help keep your freshly shaved skin healthy and hydrated. Moreover, since soap and water can often cause dry skin, the use of an aftershave moisturizer helps protect the skin from moisture loss while shaving.
