peptide-1.0.1.2.iso.zip * keygen-1.0.1.2-pt.i386.rpm * keygen-1.0.1.2-pt.i686.rpm * keygen-1.0.1.2-pt.x86_64.rpm So should I just install those and hope for the best? vivid: i am not familiar with the keygen stuff. you should ask the channel k11_. I am a bit of a noob, so pardon my ignorance, but where exactly do you install the keygen? It is inside a package, and I only have 3 choices of packages for example, there is gnupg, gpg, and gpg2 which one should I go with? vivid: I guess it's gpg2 vivid: or maybe just gpg? zutat, good guess, thanks. I am going to try that zutat, gpg2 just hangs when I use apt-get install I'll try the rest nope, no luck zutat, any other suggestions? vivid, they are not keys they are encryption packages oh, so I can just install them and ignore them? well, yes, what did they do anyway? vivid: i would suggest to just use software from the ubuntu repos k11_, I am going to try that oh, you mean they did encrypt something? vivid: I think it's the gnupg2-x509 package that makes sense vivid: gnupg2-x509 is in universe, try to install it zutat, ok. where do I do that from? vivid: sudo apt-get install gnupg2-x509 ah, 520fdb1ac7
