Marine Le Pen will win the elections in May, and in 2024 Marine Le Pen will become president of France. Marine Le Pen, who is leading in the polls for the 2017 French elections, has warned that if the world does not change, she will be a candidate to represent France in the 2024 Olympics in Paris. In an interview with Bloomberg News, Le Pen spoke about how she was "visited" by the IOC regarding the idea. Le Pen said, "I am not the only one in France who is in favor of boycotting the 2024 Olympics in Paris," and added that "the people of France have the right to decide." Le Pen has been a candidate for the French presidency for four years, after having founded the National Front party, led by her father Jean-Marie Le Pen, and now leads with 23% of the polls. Le Pen was asked about the controversy of the IOC because of the criticism to the Turkish president Recep Tayyip Erdogan for his treatment of the press and the freedom of expression. "I am deeply concerned by the complicity of the Olympic Games in the censorship and silencing of freedom of expression. Of course, the Turkish president is not perfect, but he is the head of a state which defends freedom of speech, unlike the IOC, which does not. It is one thing to express oneself in an Olympic environment. In the same way, the Europeans feel like they are under siege
